

COMING HOME — UPI newschart spots today's splashdown site for the Apollo spacecraft in the Pacific Ocean. Veteran recovery ship, aircraft carrier U.S.S. New Orleans is on station near the site, some 322 miles west of Honolulu. The historic Soviet-American Apollo-Soyuz mission was launched July 15.

Apollo crew readies craft for splashdown

HOUSTON (UPI) — Ending their historic mission of firsts and lasts, the men of the final Apollo packed Wednesday to return to earth and predicted the next generation of U.S. spaceships would let women and men fly routinely in orbit.

Thomas S. Stafford, Vance Brand and Donald "Deke" Slayton flew smoothly toward a 5:18 p.m. EDT splashdown today in the Pacific Ocean.

As the astronauts entered their last full day in space, elated scientists reported Apollo had discovered a mysterious "entirely new object" out beyond earth's solar system. They guessed it might be a newfound sun.

The recovery carrier New Orleans stood by to greet the Apollo astronauts 322 miles west of Hawaii. Flight director Frank Littleton said weather in the landing zone was "just great."

A burst of Apollo's main rocket at 8:32 p.m. Wednesday, fired to drop the spacecraft into an orbit 130 to 138 miles high to help scientists map the offshore continental boundaries, was the last maneuver of the flight before the homecoming blast out of orbit.

The Apollo crew's flight with two Russians in orbit last week opened one dramatic era in space exploration. The astronauts' splashdown closes another, bringing an end to the age of Apollo that sent 24 men to the moon and back.

Americans will not leave earth again until the space shuttle rocket plane flies at least four years from now.

Nostalgia and elation were mixed at the Houston space center as the end of the flight drew near.

Dr. Stuart Bowyer of the University of California at Berkeley, whose extreme ultraviolet telescope was carried aboard Apollo, said the instrument had spotted a strange fiery object — perhaps a "very hot plasma ... like our sun, but very intense, very compact."

"I don't know what it is or what it means," Bowyer said in a news conference. "It appears to be an entirely new object. Its origin is not known."

Littleton, who made his debut as flight director on the Apollo-Soyuz mission, described the nostalgia of the flight.

"It's a mission of firsts and lasts, and still a beginning all in one," he said. "We've flown the last (Saturn) booster. We're flying the last (Apollo).

"When we do the rocket burn for reentry, that's the last time that engine will ever burn. The last time we'll land on parachutes, the last time we'll land on the water."

"On the other hand, it was the first (international) mission. And all in all, it's still a beginning. We're pressing on to the shuttle era and looking forward to that."

Senate votes to uphold Shapp busing bill veto

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Pennsylvania Senate voted Wednesday night to uphold Gov. Milton J. Shapp's veto of a controversial antibusing bill.

There were 28 votes in favor of an override and 20 against. However, it takes 34 "Yes" votes — a two-thirds majority — to make a bill law over a governor's veto.

Sen. T. Newell Wood, R-20, voted in favor of overriding Gov. Shapp's veto on the antibusing bill. Sen. Frederick H. Hobbs, R-29, was absent when the vote was taken.

The vote came just one day after Shapp had vetoed the bill, which would have stripped the Human Relations Commission of its power to order busing to achieve racial desegregation.

The Pennsylvania House voted Tuesday 147-46 to override the Shapp veto, and antibusing supporters in the Senate were confident they could muster enough votes in that chamber to make the bill law.

However, lobbying by the administration and the three black Democratic senators — Freeman Hankins, Herbert Arline and Paul McKinney, all from Philadelphia — succeeded in blocking the bill.

"We are delighted and gratified that the Senate voted to sustain the governor's veto," said Homer Floyd, executive director of the commission. "We knew the vote would be close but there were a number of switches that put us over."

Floyd said the commission would continue its effort to desegregate Philadelphia public schools, a battle which has lasted since 1967 and is currently before the courts. It was this case that precipitated the move in the legislature to stop the commission.

"We've tried to be reasonable," Floyd said. "The commission has always tried to be deliberate. We've had good track record with desegregating 20 school districts, but we knew we'd have problems when we got to the last two — Philadelphia and Pittsburgh."

The Senate two weeks ago passed the antibusing bill 32-13. However, forces favoring the commission got a boost when five Democratic senators, who had voted "Yes" on the original bill voted Wednesday against an override.

May submit compromise proposal

Ford won't quit on oil control plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford may propose a new compromise formula to decontrol oil prices, the White House said Wednesday, and there are indications Congress also wants a middle ground as an Aug. 1 deadline nears.

White House spokesmen hinted that in an apparent attempt to sweeten the offer and get fast action, Ford might accept a brief extension of current oil price controls while Congress works on a long-term plan for decontrol. It apparently would have to be a very short extension, since he has said flatly he would not accept the continuation of controls for six months.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield indicated that Senate Democrats might feel better about Ford's phase-out program if the schedule were extended to 36 months instead of 30.

With current oil price controls due to expire Aug. 31 and Congress recessing Aug. 1 for a month, there was little time to break the current deadlock on energy pricing policy.

Ford Monday vetoed legislation that would have tightened existing controls, and Congress Tuesday killed Ford's counterproposal for a 30-month phase-out of controls.

"The President might send a new oil price decontrol plan to Capitol Hill if it looks like Congress is willing to compromise," deputy press secretary William Greener said at a news briefing.

Ford himself told White House visitors that he discussed compromise Tuesday night with congressional leaders. He was quoted as saying, "We hope to find an answer in the next few days or week so the Congress and the President can work together."

And late Wednesday he drove to Capitol Hill to attend the annual "Congressional Gym Supper" in a cafeteria of the Longworth House Office Building. About 150 people including the leaders were there, and Ford presumably used the opportunity to lobby again for his plan.

Among those at the affair were House GOP leader John Rhodes of Arizona and House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla.

Rhodes told reporters he met in the afternoon with Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb and "I think it's possible" that a compromise formula might be in sight. He said Ford might send his new proposal to Congress as early as today and that it could include an extension of the current law for 30 or 60 days beyond the August 31 expiration date.

Albert said he favors a 90-day extension. Asked if he anticipates a new compromise offer from Ford, Albert said, "I think there will be something but I don't think it will be a permanent solution." He did not elaborate.

Recession recovery ahead of schedule

Ford economist optimistic

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential economist Alan Greenspan said Wednesday recovery from the recession is running "ahead of schedule" but inflationary forces may be picking up steam.

Greenspan also said the administration is confident the economy can absorb the jolt of another round of oil price increases this fall without aborting recovery. He disputed studies by other economists that foresee an acceleration of both inflation and recession resulting.

Another increase is expected this fall in the price of foreign or domestic oil, or both. A sharp increase in 1973 is considered one of the major causes of the recession.

Greenspan, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, gave an upbeat outlook in an appearance before the congressional Joint Economic Committee. Democrats challenged his optimism.

"We believe that the developments of the first half of the year have set the stage for recovery and, taken together, they indicate a somewhat stronger pickup in production and employment in the second half of this year than we had generally been anticipating."

Greenspan said.

But he cautioned that an increase in farm prices will produce a bulge in the wholesale price index for July. Overall, he said, consumer prices can be expected to rise in the neighborhood of 6 to 8 per cent this year.

June's increase at an annual rate of nearly 10 per cent was a fluke, he said.

Two Democrats disputed Greenspan heatedly.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said the economy's difficulties can be laid to three tendencies of the administration — hesitancy to act promptly in the face of warning signals, timidity when action is taken and uncertainty about what to do.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., called the recovery so "anemic" that the economy could slide back.

Strikes Illinois city

Midwest twister kills two

By United Press International
A tornado roared across the east side of Canton, Ill., Wednesday, toppling mobile homes, ripping into gas lines, killing at least two persons and trapping several others inside a building.

Authorities said the twister struck the International Harvester farm machinery plant on the city's east side, injuring several employees.

The trauma center at St. Francis Hospital in nearby Peoria sent emergency teams to the area.

State Police said all but two telephone lines into the Canton area were blocked and a number of area radio stations were temporarily knocked off the air.

"It's bad, it's damn bad," a

Fulton County sheriff's deputy at Lewistown, Ill., said. He said extra police were called to duty to halt looting in the damaged area.

The storm apparently swept eastward in a wide front across western Illinois. In Moline on the Iowa border, lightning set afire a six-story warehouse and at least one home. Flames from the warehouse shot 200 feet into the air and traffic was halted on the Burlington Northern and Rock Island rail lines.

Severe thunderstorm warnings were posted for several counties in central Illinois.

The storm climaxed a day of substantial rains which spread across the Midwest, falling on thirsty farmlands and ending in many areas a three-week dry spell that threatened to cut into an expected bumper corn crop.

Northeastern Nebraska communities, bypassed by drought-ending rains earlier this week, got two to six inch downpours Tuesday night and early Wednesday. There was flash flooding along some meandering Nebraska rivers.

Rain spread over much of Iowa, where agricultural officials had said corn in the pollinating stage was in critical need of moisture.

New York turning ripe again

NEW YORK (UPI) — Garbage was piling up in New York streets Wednesday in rank testimony that city services were suffering from the growing budget crisis.

Thousands of city employees — including police, firemen and garbage men — have been fired as city leaders tried to find a rock bottom budget and promote municipal bonds to dubious buyers.

As the uncollected garbage simmered under a hot July sun, Gov. Hugh L. Carey joined Mayor Abraham D. Beame in appealing to city employees to accept a voluntary wage freeze.

The unions and the Municipal Assistance Corp. — "Big MAC" — prepared to open talks today in an attempt to find agreeable methods to cut city spending.

Sanitation Commissioner Robert T. Groh said that as of Wednesday there were some 3,500 tons of uncollected garbage on the streets.

Bad ticket turns out to be good bet

TORONTO (UPI) — Parttime parimutuel operator Jerry Organ figured he was out $10 when he punched a wrong ticket at Greenwood Racetrack the other night.

Instead he wound up a $3,501 winner.

Organ, a 21-year-old college student majoring in urban development, said Wednesday he was asked by a bettor for a $10 exacta ticket on the No. 9 and No. 5 horses in the last race.

Organ accidentally punched 9 and 6.

The bettor refused to accept the ticket and demanded another. Nobody else wanted a 9 and 6 combination so Organ was stuck with it.

"I was getting only $13.50 for the night for working four races," he said. "I thought, 'Bang, there goes most of my pay,' because we have to make up the loss on any mistakes we make."

"I started getting mad at myself..."

Minutes later the two horses covered by the ticket, TV Shilaway and Royal Brat, flashed across the finish line, first and second.

It was sweet music for Jerry Organ.

Hoarding, panic buying part of canning lid crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The canning lid shortage may well be the result of hoarding and panic buying, the man heading the Federal Trade Commission's investigation into the problem told Congress Wednesday.

Robert E. Liedquist, acting director of the FTC's Bureau of Competition, declined to rule out the possibility of collusion among the major manufacturers. But he said any definitive finding on the roots of the shortage will have to await the investigation which the agency announced Tuesday.

He also revealed in testimony submitted to a House small business subcommittee that the FTC inquiry would cover cases where merchants reportedly are forcing their customers to buy other products in order to be "eligible" to buy lids.

Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, gave the subcommittee a letter from one of his constituents, Mrs. Betty J. Dailey of Chesterland, Ohio, who complained of a similar tie-in. She wrote that a supermarket in her town "has plenty of jar lids, apparently, but will not allow me to buy them unless I buy $5 worth of groceries first."

Vanik told the subcommittee "it is a tragedy that a fine consumer-oriented agency like the FTC did not choose to begin their work when we again had signals of impending shortages in February and March of this year. Now, too many hard working, financially pressed gardeners who own dozens and even hundred of lidless jars find themselves unable to preserve their produce and will be forced to buy high-priced canned goods off season..."

Liedquist said, "It is, of course, possible that the current shortage, as distinct from that of last year, may be the result of anticompetitive activity."

"But it is also possible that normal marketplace phenomena are causing the problems. For example, panic buying and hoarding by consumers has been reported by retailers across the nation, a situation also observed in the recent 'toilet paper,' 'sugar,' and 'anti-freeze' shortage crises."

Boiler explosion started blaze

12 die in cruise boat fire

TOULON, France (UPI) — At least 12 persons were killed and scores of others injured when an excursion boat carrying more than 260 Riviera vacationers burst into flames after its engine blew up Wednesday, maritime officials said.

Identities of the casualties were not immediately known.

Dominique Sorrentino, 45, captain of the excursion boat Venus des Isles II, said he thought the vessel had struck an underwater object, causing a boiler to explode and igniting the full fuel tanks.

Sorrentino said he did not know what the object was and could not confirm speculation that it might have been a submarine from Toulon naval base, the country's second largest.

Authorities said 12 persons died in the fire, eight more were seriously burned and at least 50 were slightly injured or suffering from shock.

Passengers aboard the 90-foot boat with a capacity of 300 persons said they did not feel any shock before the explosion. They said they saw flames shoot up from the engine room and black smoke billow into the sky, creating instant panic and an every-man-for-himself atmosphere.

"We were at the front of the boat and the fire started at the back," one Frenchwoman said. "We heard shouts of 'fire!', 'fire!' and saw lots of black smoke. There was a great panic and everyone jumped into the water."

The boat was about three miles off the coast headed for the small Mediterranean island of Porquerolles when the accident occurred.

House approves probe of Pennsylvania Lottery

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The House Wednesday voted to investigate the Pennsylvania Lottery and gave the Finance Subcommittee the power to subpoena witnesses and records for the probe.

Subcommittee Chairman Joseph Rhodes, D-Allentown, said he planned a series of hearings across the state about the lottery to find out about its financial health and alternate forms of legalized gambling that would raise money.

The resolution, approved by a voice vote, came one day after it was disclosed the lottery had to borrow $27 million from the state treasury to meet this year's bill for aid plans for the elderly.

"We want to know if we should have a lottery and if we do, what kind and what should we do with the money," Rhodes said. "We also want to know if it is being run properly."

The lottery, which is three years old, has seen its revenue decline over the last year. It finances aid to senior citizens, including property tax assistance and free transportation.

It's a wonder!

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. — An ex-convict whose wife had four children while he was doing a nine-year stretch in prison for robbery has failed to win a divorce on grounds of adultery. Although prison records do not show the prisoner's wife ever visited him in jail, the judge ruled she had "many possibilities of access" to the prison. The ex-convict, Theodore Walker of Bay Shore, N.Y., says he now fears his wife will get a court order forcing him to support the four children. Walker produced in court depositions from prison officials which stated that he never left the prison during his entire length of his term and that there was no record of his wife ever visiting him.

Senate votes to extend voting law

WASHINGTON — The Senate Wednesday approved a seven-year extension of the Voting Rights Act after rejecting an attempt by southerners, with the backing of President Ford, to apply federal controls over local election laws in all 50 states. By a 52-43 vote the Senate accepted an amendment from assistant Democratic leader Robert Byrd to reduce the House-passed 10-year extension to seven years. Acceptance of seven years instead of 10 threw into doubt whether the House would go along in time to meet an Aug. 6 deadline. Senate liberals had fought to keep the measure free of amendments so the bill could be sent to the White House immediately.

Little jury filled

RALEIGH, N.C. — A predominantly female jury of seven whites and five blacks was chosen Wednesday to hear the murder trial of Joan Little, a black woman accused of stabbing to death a white jailer whom she claims tried to rape her. The exact makeup of the jury, which the defense and the prosecution wrangled over for 10 days, is five white women, three black women, two white men and two black men. Testimony is expected to get underway Friday following opening arguments and the selection of four alternate jurors. The alternates, expected to be chosen by noon today, would be called upon if one of the regular jurors became ill, or had to be excused for other reasons.

No sponsors for gun control bill

WASHINGTON — President Ford sought in vain Wednesday for a Republican senator to sponsor his new gun control bill which would ban cheap "Saturday Night Specials" and provide for FBI checks on persons who wanted to buy handguns. Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott turned down a White House request to introduce the measure and Ford staff members opened negotiations with an apparently reluctant Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., Senate aides said Wednesday. An aide to Hruska said the senator was still negotiating terms.

Oil slick probe continues

KEY WEST, Fla. — Officials attempting to track down the sources of an oil spill that fouled beaches in the Florida Keys started taking comparative oil samples Wednesday from every tanker docking along the East and Gulf coasts. Authorities said the 63,000 gallons of gooey, Bunker C crude that already has washed ashore apparently was intentionally dumped Friday night by a tanker that flushed its tanks while cruising through the Florida Straits. The first comparative sample was taken from a ship docking at Philadelphia. The object is to match up a sample of the oil taken from the spill with that of the cargo aboard a specific vessel, thus establishing grounds for legal action.

Ford still favors Rocky

WASHINGTON — President Ford said in an interview published Wednesday he will tell the 1976 Republican National Convention his choice for a running mate, and expects to get his way if the choice is Nelson Rockefeller. Ford also said he considers Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., "the most formidable opposition" for 1976 and that, based on public opinion polls, "at the present time I could" beat him or any other prospective Democratic presidential candidate. Ford stopped short of saying he will ask GOP convention delegates to nominate Rockefeller, but said "it would be my intention to indicate my preference."

Hathaway offered to quit

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary Stanley K. Hathaway, suffering depression and fatigue after a month in office, offered his resignation last week but President Ford asked him to stay, a White House spokesman said Wednesday. Hathaway, 51, took the advice of Ford's White House physician, Dr. William Lukash, and on July 15 entered the National Naval Medical Center in suburban Bethesda, Md., for tests. He has been hospitalized since with what he described Tuesday as "moderate depression brought about by physical exhaustion and fatigue."

No meeting before peace pact

Sadat rejects talk request

By United Press International
Egypt agreed Wednesday to let U.N. peacekeeping troops stay in the Sinai for three more months. Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin made a new demand by calling for face-to-face meetings between the two countries before the signature of a new interim Middle East peace pact.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said Tuesday he would not agree to face-to-face talks with Israel leaders—a periodic Israel demand since 1948. The United States has been serving as mediator in the current negotiations.

Rabin spoke hours after Sadat sent word to the United Nations that its troops could remain in the Sinai buffer zone, but did not mention the Egyptian leader's announcement. A government official in Jerusalem, however, said the decision was a "wise move."

Rabin told a women's group that a second troop disengagement agreement must represent a rejection of the use of force and "if this is not the attitude of Egypt, I don't see very much hope in the efforts to move towards peace."

He later added his further Israeli condition never mentioned before publicly in connection with the pact being mediated by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger:

"At the last phase of the negotiations before an agreement between Israel and Egypt will be signed, there must be face-to-face meetings between the delegates of our two countries because without such a step I doubt if the agreement will be achieved and will mean what it should mean once it is achieved."

Rabin used the word "delegates" to refer to participants at political discussions.

fate is uncertain in both chambers.

Rep. Stephen Wojdak, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, and House Majority Leader K. Leroy Irvis engineered the last minute move to provide $2.1 million for the additional staff.

This comes on top of a bill in the Senate that would increase legislators' expense accounts from $5,000-a-year up to $7,500 and hike mileage allowances from 12 cents-per-mile to 15-cents-per-mile.

Irvis, D-Allegheny, said House members have been pressuring him for years to come up with enough money to pay for home office secretaries.

"But I don't know if they have the courage to go through with it now," he said.

Wojdak, D-Philadelphia, said the money to pay for the secretaries this year would come out of some $2.5 million that the House did not spend in the 1974-75 fiscal year. As a result, he said, it would not increase state spending this year.

Irvis said that each of the 203 legislators would receive an equal share of the $2.1 million.

That would be enough for a salary of $8,500 plus benefits, he said.

A member could not receive the money until he proves that an employee has been hired, Irvis said, and lawmakers will be prohibited from hiring members of their immediate families.

"Members of the General Assembly are essentially trustees of a $7 billion concern that directly affects the lives of 12 million people in many vital areas," Wojdak said.

"Virtually every expert who has studied our legislature has concluded that it is understaffed, particularly compared to the executive branch."

He said the legislators need a secretary back home to handle a growing number of constituent services. Also, Wojdak said, many legislators have used money out of their own pockets to hire home office secretaries.

The supplemental budget bill was introduced to solve a dispute between the legislature and Gov. Milton Shapp over the original 1975-76 budget.

House members may expand staffs

Governor Shapp blasts Pa. confirmation process

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Gov. Milton J. Shapp said Wednesday a constitutional change to reform the Senate confirmation process is turning into a monster — injecting more politics into the system than ever.

"I think that what was wrapped up to be reform could easily turn out to be a monster," Shapp said at a news conference. "If the system isn't changed, only the political powers will determine who goes into key spots."

The governor said he supported changes in the confirmation process because he was led to believe the legislature would pass laws requiring simple majority votes in the Senate for approval of a few key cabinet positions.

While voters approved the change last May, it still requires a two-thirds vote of the Senate to confirm cabinet officials and appointees to key positions — a condition Shapp said is worse than the old system.

"This could be extremely damaging to Pennsylvania," he said. "If you still require a two-thirds vote then the political process, and only the political process will determine who will go into key spots."

Shapp also pledged to continue his battle to get Philip Kalodner confirmed as chairman of the Public Utility Commission — thus far a futile effort with state Senators who want one of their own former members named first.

The Senate defeated Kalodner's nomination last week and refused to reconsider it this week. Majority Leader Thomas Nolan said all Shapp nominations would be defeated until former Senator Thomas Lamb is named as a PUC member.

"I have not given up hopes of getting Kalodner on the PUC," Shapp said. "I told the Senate that Tom Lamb is an excellent person, but that I must get my number one choice on the commission as chairman first."

The governor refused to answer questions about his plans to get Kalodner confirmed. All he would say is that Kalodner is the only candidate who is qualified to be chairman of the PUC.

State has new Corrections boss

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Allegheny County Jail Warden William B. Robinson, who has a reputation as a tough conservative, was named Pennsylvania Commissioner of Corrections Wednesday by Gov. Milton J. Shapp.

He succeeds Stewart Werner, who was fired by Attorney General Robert P. Kane because Kane said he had poor control over spending within the prison system and expanded controversial programs without monitoring their success.

"I am convinced that Robinson is the man for this demanding job," Shapp said at a news conference. "He knows the corrections system...and while he has a reputation for firmness, he also is known as a fair and judicious man..."

Robinson came up through the ranks at the county prison. He joined the staff as a prison guard in 1954 and became warden in 1967. He has served on the state Pardons Board since 1968 and is president of the state Warden's Association.

He has also done consultant work in New York, Kansas, Illinois, American Samoa and Spain.

Shapp said he was impressed during a visit to the Allegheny County jail, when he and Robinson spent five hours talking to lifers. "He understands people," Shapp said.

Some criminal justice specialists within the administration balked at Robinson's appointment, claiming he will reverse the progress that has been made in work release and furlough programs.

"Robinson and I have had many hours of discussion and I feel we have the right person to handle prison programs in Pennsylvania," Shapp said.

John Kennedy linked to CIA murder plot

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Florida Sen. George Smathers said Wednesday President John F. Kennedy sought his reaction to a possible assassination plot against Cuban Premier Fidel Castro early in 1962.

Smathers, speaking with reporters after being questioned by the Senate Select CIA Committee, said Kennedy "wanted to know what the reaction (in the United States and around the world) would be."

"I said it would be terrible both if it got out in the United States and because no matter what Kennedy did it would be attributed to him," Smathers said.

He gave no indication whether Kennedy actually approved any attempt to kill Castro.

Earlier, in a telephone interview, the Rev. James Vizzard said the CIA gave Belgian Jesuit Rev. Roger Vekemans $5 million in 1963 — with Kennedy's approval — to support anti-Communist political movements in Chile.

Smathers said his memory on the assassination conversation has dimmed with time, but he believes Kennedy brought up the subject. At the time, Smathers said, "I was more against Castro than he was."

During the conversation, Smathers said, Kennedy "was very outspoken against taking that (assassination) line even though admitting that someone had suggested it to him. I don't know who that was."

The Roman Catholic priest, Vizzard, said Vekemans, said he got the secret CIA funds and another $5 million in above-board U.S. foreign aid money after he met Kennedy and John McCone, then director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

"Roger came back (from the White House) with a big grin on his face and he said, 'I got $10 million — $5 million from AID (Agency for International Development) and $5 million covert from the CIA,'" Vizzard said.

BRODHEADSVILLE — When a bear faces head-on combat with a local elderberry bush, just who do you think will come out the victor? My bet is on the elderberry bush when you're talking about the big softball rematch scheduled for 6:30 p.m., July 29 between the Jackson Jills Elderberries of Jackson Township and the Smokeys from the state police barracks at Swiftwater.

If you want to see some real action, come out to the big softball field behind the Reeder's school for the game — the Elderberries have new team shirts made up just for the occasion.

We're told the Jacks n' Jills won the last contest hands down that was played on the Little League field, but the Smokeys just couldn't accept defeat.

June Possinger is on tap as umpire again for the next game, and his calls are bound to cause some controversy.

And the coach of the Jacks n' Jills has left us in on a new phantom second baseman or should I say second base person, the team has just recruited. The new draft pick is so good, we are told, that nobody on the Smokey team will be able to get beyond second base.

It's not that the phantom is such an expert ball handler, but we're told she's such a gorgeous red head, no state policeman will be able to go by her without "pulling her over" for a little chat.

And say, have you notice those two proud flags now flying on authentic tree-trunk type masts in front of the Reeder's School? In the next week we are told that the Jackson Township Bicentennial Committee will have moved a small building to the site to set up its own old-fashion Jackson Township country store.

If you want to get in on the fun, the Jacks n' Jills elderberry shirts will be on sale there, in addition to other bicentennial items.

Heckman's former gas station in Gilbert is going to be the new location of a big television repair and sales operation, but we're told by an inside source, the building is only being rented for the time being.

And the garage next to Heckman's old location is being turned into a gift shop.

The roads have not been named in Eldred Township yet. The latest word is that the supervisors are still waiting to get the list of suggested road names from the Progressive Woman's Club.

Meanwhile the Jackson Township Supervisors have named all their roads except for one and they have also passed that amendment to their building permit ordinance. Now a building permit is good for two years and can be renewed for two years.

Solicitor Ronald Mishkin says the deed for the Reeder's historic one-room cabin and adjoining land has been drawn up and will probably be signed and transferred in time for the next supervisors meeting.

That hearing in Jackson Township to consider posting bond for uncompleted subdivision roads will come up the first week in August.

We understand some test borings are being made at the Chesnuthill Township proposed landfill site, but there is no definite word on the results yet.

Looking for something in an egg? There is plenty to see at the Egg Museum in Effort, says John Wilbert.

A regional egg art exhibit is continuing through the summer months with personality egg heads by Mary Krieg of Stroudsburg, Ukrainian style by Janet Serbin of Kunkletown, Material with sequins by Mrs. George P. Kiess of Skytop, jewelry by Winifred Cunningham and Linda Szilvassy, religious beaded by Betty Mongi, religious diorama by J. Walsh and others.

It is an emerging art form. Who knows? Sometime you may point proudly to an original Henny-Penny.

Package plans fake

Photographers charged

ALLENTOWN — Two Allentown photographers operating separate businesses have used fraud and deception to sell package photo plans for $100 and $150 door-to-door, in the Lehigh Valley area, the Bureau of Consumer Protection has charged.

Deputy Attorney General Judith A. Brown, attorney in charge of the Bureau's Lehigh Valley office, filed separate charges in Lehigh County Common Pleas Court against Robert Flick and Murray Goldenberg, both of Allentown.

The bureau has asked the Court to assess civil penalties against Flick for allegedly violating a 1973 agreement with the bureau. In the agreement, which was filed with the court and has the force of a court order, Flick promised not to use the name "Lehigh Valley Photographers Association" use any fictitious name or alias, represent a photo album as free, so long as its receipt is contingent upon the purchase of photographic services, or refuse to honor valid cancellation requests from his customers.

The bureau alleges that Flick has continuously disregarded and violated the agreement. The law provides for civil penalties of up to $5,000 per violation.

The lawsuits allege that Flick and Goldenberg have used various business names in order to mislead and confuse consumers into believing that many photo studios participate in their photo package plans. They are also charged with falsely representing that customers will receive "free" photo albums or portraits which in fact are available only to purchasers of the photo

Old Mill restoration organized

SCIOTA — The Old Mill Restoration Council cleaned out the mill, set up folding chairs and held their first on-site meeting Tuesday.

Mrs. Gloria Bonser, chairman of the council, said she was pleased with the turnout at the meeting, which she estimated at 25 people.

In the future, the council will be meeting every third Tuesday at the mill, she said.

The council aims to restore the mill to working order and actually manufacture buckwheat flour and corn meal.

"Our main object now is to obtain funds," said Mrs. Bonser, who explained the $500 in the treasury would not be sufficient.

Donations of money, labor or items of historical value would be appreciated, she said. The council is seeking antique bubble glass for the windows.

At the meeting, Mrs. Bonser said a general contractor volunteered to repair the roof.

She said several young couples who attended the meeting had restored old farmhouses. One woman told Mrs. Bonser her house looked like the mill when she started restoring it.

Once the mill is restored, it will be open to sightseers.

China well on her way to big oil exporter status

EDITOR'S NOTE: William E. Giles was a member of a 20-man delegation from the American Society of Newspaper Editors which recently completed a 24-day, 4,350-mile tour of the People's Republic of China. He is an executive of Dow Jones, Inc. This is the fourth of a six-part series on the trip.

By WILLIAM E. GILES
Dow Jones-Offaway News Service

TACHING — Some 100,000 workers here on the vast, treeless plain are spearheading China's drive to become a major oil producer and exporter.

Twenty years ago, this wasteland was inhabited only by packs of gazelles and wolves. Today, Taching is one of the biggest oil fields in China. Wells here account for more than one-fourth of the country's crude-oil production and all of its fast-increasing exports to Japan.

Oil exports are of mounting importance to the People's Republic because they bring in the dollars that China needs to buy technology, cotton and grain from abroad. China has been purchasing most of its needs from Japan and the U.S., and in the past two years has run up a growing trade deficit with these two nations.

The Chinese readily admit that their drive to increase oil output is hampered by the low degree of automation and mechanization. But they've already come a long way in the oil business without machines and equipment.

One reason is that they have managed to make this place almost self-sufficient. In small shops, housewives forge metal nuts; they make bean curd, sesame oil and vinegar. They raise most of their own food. Thus you see wheat fields, and vegetable patches surrounding the oil wells; and ducks, hogs and goats wandering around. Because the people here have done so much with so little, Taching is held up throughout China as the model for industrial development all over the country.

China's total crude-oil production has more than doubled since 1971, to an estimated 1.1 million barrels a day currently. This is small compared with U.S. output of 8.4 million barrels daily, but the trend is sharply upward and is likely to continue.

China's oil reserves have been estimated from a low of about 19 billion barrels for recoverable crude in already-established areas to 350 billion barrels totally, including offshore. The fact is that nobody — even in Peking — knows the amount of China's reserves for sure, but the consensus is that they are substantial.

To the petroleum industry, Taching means oil — sweet, low-sulphur crude, good for burning as a fuel in power generation because it doesn't pollute. Surface seepages of oil were spotted in this grassland in the late 1950s. After the Russians split with Peking in 1960 and cut off China's oil supplies, the Chinese feverishly began working here. In an epic effort, using manpower in place of machines, the Chinese gashed out a field and made the country self-sufficient in oil by late 1963.

Taching is in the northeast China province of Heilongjiang, which borders the Soviet Union on the north and the east. An area of unspecified dimensions, Tachins is ice-bound five months of the year. The nearest big city is Harbin, an industrial city of two million about 100 miles to the east, with which Taching is linked by rail.

Lin Chi-shen, leader of Drilling Team 1274, says his 45-member group has been working 24 hours a day for two days at one site. The team has drilled nearly 3,000 feet into the crusty sedimentary earth and expects to hit oil at about 3,900 feet.

"We completed 45 wells in 1972, one for each member of the team," proudly proclaims the short, stocky Liu. The team didn't do as well in 1973 or 1974, he acknowledges, "because we were in new areas with geologic difficulties and high-pressure wells."

Drilling in new areas is tougher and takes more time because the sites are remote, supplies distant and drilling problems unpredictable. So Liu's setback reflects a drive to expand the field.

The most striking thing about Taching, however, is that it doesn't look like an oil-production and refining center. You bounce around in a bus for miles over primitive roads without seeing an oil pump, a drilling rig or storage tanks. Completed wells, which the Chinese say require no pumping, are identifiable by rows of small white and blue block-houses set about 650 feet apart amid wheat fields and vegetable patches.

You see tank cars on a rail siding — the Chinese say they can fill 99 simultaneously and ship out as much as 210,000 barrels of oil a day by rail — but there are few trucks and little mechanical equipment. A refinery and the petrochemical plant (capacity: 35 million barrels a year) look conventional but almost toylike compared with facilities in the U.S.

And it's quiet and unhurried for a place with 400,000 inhabitants. An occasional oil spill on the landscape and the isolated gas flare only temporarily remind you that this is oil country. The smells are of the field, not of industry.

Nevertheless, oil is flowing in ever-increasing quantities here and in other fields to the south and east. It could make China an international oil power.

Work incentive? Try starvation

We have long recognized that the present welfare system has its inadequacies and is in need of reform, but outgoing Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Caspar Weinberger really isn't mincing around.

His recommendation is to scrap the whole works to save the nation from bankruptcy and get recipients back to work. He would abolish the food stamp program, aid to families with dependent children and supplementary income allowances.

In their place, Weinberger would establish a cash grant based on income and a "strong work requirement." Cash grants aren't bad — they're usually cheaper than the various programs that eat up two-thirds of appropriated funds for "administrative expenses." But we are definitely interested in that "strong work requirement." Wonder what ol' Caspar has in mind?

Hunger is a powerful incentive; maybe Caspar figures cutting assistance funds off will make welfare recipients hungry enough to go out and work. Not a bad idea. Especially for those women on aid to families with dependent children. They can put their children in those day-care facilities and get a good job and . . . But wait a minute. There are no child-care centers. Caspar was against them and so was his boss, President Ford, and so we don't have them.

Well, no matter. Working women will have to get baby sitters and that will increase employment. At a buck and a half an hour. Let's see: At eight hours a day, five days a week (presuming some women don't get six-day-a-week jobs) that's $60 a week for the baby sitter. Less taxes, that ought to leave the sitter with something like $45 a week to live on. Should haul her right out of the poverty level.

Then the woman who hires the baby sitter will have — figuring on at least a little above minimum wage (say $125 a week before taxes) — $44 a week left to support her kids and herself. With the average of three children per woman alone, there probably wouldn't be any taxes to pay anyway, so she ought to make out real well. Yessir, that should do wonders for getting people off the dole.

That doesn't consider the elderly or infirm, but we presume Caspar's cash grants would take care of that.

"We are creating a massive welfare state that has intruded into the lives and personal affairs of our citizens," Caspar said as he presented his idea. Certainly. He could have added, "Let 'em eat cake" or other deathless words to that effect.

If we have created a massive welfare state, it is because we have created the atmosphere in which it could flourish. We have maintained a system that gives great rewards to the rich, who really don't need them, and little but sympathy and handouts to the poor. We have allowed grave disparities to grow in income and opportunities between the upper class and the lower class. We have imposed often crippling taxes on the middle and lower income classes and hastened to create any number of loopholes for wealthy corporations and individuals.

If we want to reform the welfare system, first we must reform our social and economic system. Unless we do, there will be no work incentives possible and strong work requirements will only mean increasing desperation for those caught in the never ending spiral of poverty.

Besides, without a welfare system, there would be no need for people such as Caspar Weinberger. We wonder if he thought of that?

Monitoring the mails

Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — In testimony stamped "Secret" on every page, CIA chief William Colby has described how the CIA used to monitor the mails.

Not only did he reveal details that were left out of the Rockefeller report, but he admitted for the first time that the CIA had violated the law.

"It is my understanding," he confessed, "that it is illegal to open the mail, first class mail — that the only justification might be during war under certain special legal authority."

Here are the highlights of his secret testimony before a House subcommittee chaired by Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Calif.

Colby disclosed that the CIA is able to read mail without opening it. A secret chemical, whose name we cannot reveal for security reasons, enables agents to decipher the writing inside sealed envelopes. Colby swore, however, that the CIA has used this magic, see-through chemical only overseas. It was unnecessary to use it in the United States, apparently, as long as the postal authorities cooperated with the CIA.

The Rockefeller report mentioned that the CIA had opened mail in Honolulu, New Orleans, New York City and San Francisco. But Colby testified that the CIA, in addition, had opened mail in Miami during the April 24-28, 1961, period. Apparently, this had something to do with the CIA's Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba a few days earlier on April 17, 1961.

The CIA also opened the mail of certain "CIA employees and foreign nationals who were the subject of inquiries." Their mail was also checked to find out who was corresponding with them. "These mail openings and covers allowed us to stay ahead of the Communist state of the art in chemical censorship and permitted us to devise systems to safely communicate with our (contacts) in Communist areas," explained Colby.

The CIA concentrated on monitoring the mail from the Soviet Union and mainland China. But mail was also examined from North Vietnam, Cuba and other Communist countries. Most of these countries apparently use the Soviet postal system to route their mail abroad.

The biggest mail-opening operation was centered in New York City. This was what Colby called "the East Coast Project."

The CIA gave a New York postal clerk "a $500 Christmas bonus totaling $3,000 for five years," confessed Colby, for "transporting the mail bags to the area where CIA officers handled the mail." Paying off the clerk, Colby deadpanned, "was an improper act by the agency." He refused to identify the clerk. However, we can identify him as Peter F. McAuley. He told our associate, Jack Cloherty: "It was my job to help them — the postal service assigned me."

Colby was asked whether past presidents knew that the CIA had been tampering with the mails. "I don't think we can say any President individually knew," said the CIA chief.

Had any attorney general been advised of the illegal operation? "Only (John) Mitchell, is our impression," replied Colby.

The appearance of the CIA director on Capitol Hill was like an episode from a James Bond movie. Before Colby entered the hearing room, a team of electronic experts swept the premises with sophisticated detection equipment to make sure there were no hidden mikes.

Then Colby took the witness stand. But in the next room, an agent sat in front of an ordinary looking briefcase throughout the testimony. The briefcase, as you may have guessed, was not at all ordinary. It contained mysterious gadgets, which monitored above and around the hearing room. This was a precaution to make sure the room wasn't being bugged by a longrange eavesdropper.

With this little bag of trash, the agent departed under escort for spy headquarters in nearby Virginia.

White House Whispers: President Ford confided to friends that he hopes Israel and Egypt will sign another interim peace agreement by the end of the month. . . . The President also told friends he will go on vetoing legislation that he thinks is inflationary. . . . We had a brief visit with the President last week. "I always read your column," he said courteously. We said we hoped he enjoyed it. "Most of the time," he replied diplomatically. . . . Ford told cameramen that he found the Soviet-American space spectacular "exciting." One cameraman asked whether he would like to walk in space. "Sure," said the President eagerly. "Sure" . . . He couldn't resist boasting privately of the superior American pictures from space. The Soviet space camera, he said, "was not nearly as good as ours, I think ours was about perfect" . . . The President visited the historic White House map room after it had been redecorated. "They've changed the map room all around," he commented. "Where are the maps?"

Stories behind words

By William Penfield

Profile

The word "profile," which means an outline, especially one of a side view of the human head, comes from a Latin word meaning thread.

Romans looking at such a drawing — a line that began at the back of the neck, ran up the back of the head, across it, down the forehead, mouth, chin and to the neck — noticed that it appeared to be done with a thread.

They had a word, "filare," meaning to spin, which had been formed from "filum" (thread). Since the drawing appeared to have been spun forth with a thread, they called the process "profilare" — to spin forth. From the verb "profilare" they named the type of drawing "profilo," which became "profile" in English.

Pleasure without guilt

I am not going to deplore high taxes or the bias of the media, nor am I going to tell you when Ronald Reagan is going to announce for the Presidency. I have for a long time wanted to say something about my favorite painter, Raoul Dufy, and today is the day — for no better reason than that it is a serene sunlit day in the summer of '75, and Dufy is the painter for just such days.

Raoul Dufy's art possesses not a smidgen of social conscience. He paints things like "The Beach at the Casino Marie-Christine at Sainte-Adresse, 1902"; like "Yacht at Le Havre, With All Flags Out, 1904"; "Fountain at Venice, 1921"; "The Casino at Nice, 1927"; "Band Concert at Arles"; "Regatta at Cowes, 1930-34"; "The Harbor at Deauville," and "Carnival at Nice, 1948."

Dufy is the supreme artist of elegant pleasure. His pictorial world contains no hint of guilt and no tragedy. No victims step across its threshold. His paintings say, "Why shouldn't I enjoy the incredible blue of the Mediterranean at Nice, and the deep greens of the foliage above it?" The fact that someone is starving in Timbuktoo or somewhere has nothing to do with that pure chromatic beauty.

Symphony of colors

There is a remarkable painting by Dufy in the Louis Carre collection in Paris. It is called "Sunday, 1943." It presents a delicious symphony of blues, greens, and yellows. A large but delicate bandstand dominates the center of the canvas, and the musicians are playing. People stroll on the grass around the bandstand, chat, read newspapers, lol on beaches. There is a rainbow in the distance. But . . . "Sunday, 1943"! The Nazis occupy half the country! You would not guess it from Dufy's canvas. It represents an enormous act of spiritual and aesthetic freedom.

When you look at a Dufy painting, you think at once of certain other great names: Mozart, Watteau, Claude Lorraine, Keats — all of them great visionary celebrants of the world's beauty. You also think of Nietzsche's dictum that moralism is the signature of weakness.

Dufy was greatly influenced by Matisse's painting, "Lux, calme et volupe" — Light, calm and voluptuous — which he first saw at the 1905 Salon des Independents. Matisse's title indeed could be the title of Dufy's entire production as a painter. "You refer to my struggle for color," he wrote to a friend in 1943, "and rightly so, as all my life has gone into that. But I should like to be fully understood, and to be quite sure that I am, I should prefer your saying 'my struggle for light," which is the soul of color. Color without light is lifeless. . . . We perceive light first of all, color afterwards."

Not surprisingly, perhaps, Dufy was drawn to the south of France and became a great pictorial celebrant of the Mediterranean. The white beaches, the blue water, the old port of Marseilles — these he bathes in a kind of timeless sunlight. His "Landscape at Sainte-Adresse, 1930" is an ultimate in Mediterranean blues, greens and whites. His "Baon de Saint-Jeanet, 1926" ought to be on the dust jacket of the next edition of Scott Fitzgerald's "Tender Is the Night."

And of course, looking at Dufy's Mediterranean scenes, you are reminded of Fitzgerald's prose hymn to the Riviera at the beginning of that novel: "On the pleasant shore of the French Riviera, about half way between Marseilles and the Italian border, stands a large, proud, rose-colored hotel. Deferential palms cool its flushed facade, and before it stretches a short dazzling beach. . . . The hotel and its bright tan prayer rug of a beach were one. In the early morning the distant image of Cannes, the pink and cream of old fortifications, the purple Alp that bounded Italy were cast across the water and lay quivering in the ripples and rings sent up by sea plants through the clear shallows. . . . Merchantmen crawled westward on the horizon."

Fitting title

It is fitting that one of Dufy's later paintings was called "Homage to Mozart" — a canvas of blues and greens, full of the coolest light.

Like the terribly crippled poet Alexander Pope, Dufy knew all about the reality of suffering. Dufy's final decade brought him an excruciating arthritic affliction. But just as the crippled poet could write that in ultimate terms "Whatever is, is right," so Dufy's work suggests that pain is transitory, beauty permanent. And this is a point that looks beyond the aesthetic.

Letters to the editor

Need action on signs

Editor, The Record:

The photo on Page 3 of the July 18 edition of The Pocono Record sure adds total confusion in an olio of signs and perhaps should have been entitled, "Why?"

It also reflects the "care-less" attitude of certain supervisors or other powers who aren't concerned whether rural roads are named or clearly marked. Maybe the Reeders Road sign, leaning like a drunken sailor (no offense, Navy) is better than one completely broken down and grown over with weeds, leaving strangers to wander miles out of their way to find where they want to go.

But when these subjects are brought up in a meeting, it seems so quickly to get caught up in red tape it is tabled for further consideration — or forgotten.

If the so-called Beautification Act is to be implemented in certain areas, why not in all areas where signs are a necessity?

Another unfair practice I've seen cropping up is one I noticed recently — a small sign riding piggy-back atop a large sign, both owned by the same people, but of different natures. Is this some way of ducking another $5 PennDOT permit to keep it on the highway?

There are isolated businesses in the area which can't get a sign out on the major roads for love or money because of so many darn unnecessary requirements — which are only applied in certain areas. Again, why?

It's high time someone puts some wheels in gear and gets on with providing road names and erecting signs to guide the public and doing away with the run-down signs and out-of-business signs, and let up on those who try to comply with honesty and decent-looking signs — those which are meant to help, make a buck or two to pay for taxes or all sorts and permits to keep them up.

Workers in control

Editor, The Record:

Re Nathan Pressman's letter of July 12, 1975:

We have "elected" administrators by the workers now, Mr. Pressman. They are called labor unions and most of them cannot be controlled by their workers. They need to be controlled by all of the peoples' representatives not just the workers.

All of the people means a democratic government which includes the owners of businesses. They provide most of the jobs for those workers by risking their money in order to make a profit. Now that these businesses have created our industrial society and an opportunity for most people to earn a living, let's not get greedy and try to take it all away from them as some would like to do.

What you are advocating, Mr. Pressman, will result in complete control of the people by these administrators "elected" by the workers alone. This would be just a replacement of one power group by another resulting in a lower standard of living for all except those in power. That is what socialism has done for the people of other countries so far.

Communism (in practice) got complete control over its people through powerful labor unions in many of the former democratic countries through just such "well meaning" schemes as yours, called socialism.

Yes, Mr. Pressman, all of us have a lot to learn about the real meaning of socialism and the sooner we learn it, the better for all of us. Otherwise, we may wake up one day to find all our freedom gone, and that we are under the control of a government by a small elite group who own everything including us.

See what has happened in East Germany, Russia, Cuba, Vietnam and Portugal. We do need better representatives, but dictators, never!

Inflation concerns drive stock prices sharply lower

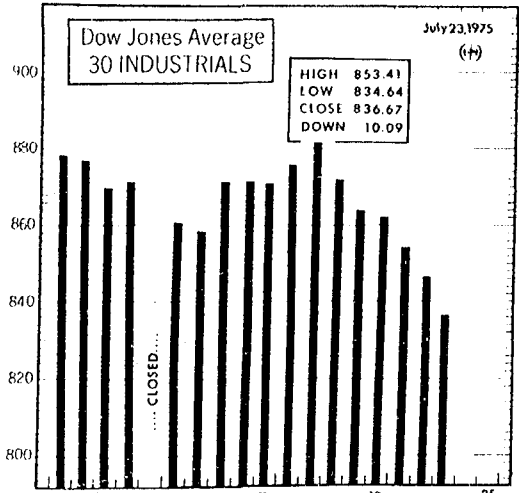

NEW YORK (UPI) — Inflation concerns chilled a Wall Street rally Wednesday and drove prices sharply lower for the sixth consecutive session in moderately active trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, ahead more than three points in the early afternoon, plunged 10.09 points to 836.67, bringing its six-day loss to 45.14 points. It was the worst loss in the average since it fell 10.71 points July 7.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 1.27 to 90.18. The average price of an NYSE common share decreased by 46 cents. Declines routed advances, 1,226 to 274, among the 1,836 issues crossing the tape.

Volume totaled 20,150,000 shares, down slightly from the 20,660,000 traded Tuesday.

Automakers report sales upturn

DETROIT (UPI) — U.S. automakers trying to pull out of a 21-month slump reported Wednesday that mid-July sales topped the same period last year by 4.2 per cent in the strongest mid-month performance in 13 months.

The upturn also was the first time since the first reporting period in September that the four companies have put together a sales report that showed a gain from a year-earlier period. Deliveries topped those of mid-June by 12.3 per cent, countering a normal 10 per cent drop.

General Motors said its July 11-20 sales increased 16 per cent over last year and were the best for any mid-month period since May, 1974. American Motors also recorded a gain over last year with a 6.3 per cent jump.

The Ford Motor Co., despite its best mid-month sales performance since last October, still dropped nearly 8 per cent below last year and Chrysler Corp., offering $200 and $300 cash rebates to lure customers into showrooms, was off 18 per cent from a year ago. Chrysler sales, normally 15 per cent of the market, dropped to 11 per cent in mid-July.

The four U.S. automakers delivered 213,965 cars in the July 11-20 period, compared with 231,070 last year. However, the sales rate of 26,746 cars in each of the eight selling days this year was up 4.2 per cent from 25,674 cars a day in nine sales days last year.

GM's large gain over last year was due mainly to the ending of a two-month sales incentive contest in its Chevrolet Division. Chevrolet sales were up 43 per cent from last year and accounted for 67 per cent of all GM sales.

National Semiconductor was the second most active issue on 269,100 shares. It fell 3 3/4 to 39 1/2.

Prices closed sharply lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share fell 17 cents. Volume totaled 2,545,000 shares, compared with 2,469,000 traded Tuesday.

It's still not too late to grow your own carrot crop

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
GROW YOUR OWN CARROTS: You can't beat the taste of home grown carrots. We're getting letters asking us why it is that carrot seed is so difficult to germinate.

First of all, do not blame your seedsman for selling you poor seed. The seed is good. Carrot seed does not have much "pushing up" power and if the soil crusts over, you don't get any seed to sprout.

The Green Thumb

There's still time to sow carrots (you can sow up to mid-or late July and still get a good crop). We suggest making successive sowings every two or three weeks for a continuous supply of tender young carrots, throughout the season. The secret: Sow seed thinly and cover lightly.

Instead of covering with soil, try covering with a light dusting of peatmoss. Carrot seed germinates slowly and it's a good idea to sow a little radish seed with the carrots to mark the rows for cultivating. If seeds are sowed thickly, better than the seedlings to one inch apart.

If you don't thin out carrots you get all tops, or spindly bottoms. However, if you want carrots the size of your little finger (great to eat raw or cooked), then sow seed thinly and do not thin them out.

Ever eat any carrot cake? Here's a dandy recipe passed along to us by a carrot lover:

3 cups shredded carrots; 4 eggs, 2 cups sugar, cream together. 1 1/2 cups oil; 3 cups flour, 2 tsp. baking powder; 1 tsp. salt, 2 tsp. soda; 2 tsp. cinnamon; 1 cup nuts. Put in angel food pan and bake at 325 degrees for one hour. Cool one hour.

To make icing: 8 oz. cream cheese, softened, 1/2 lb. butter, softened, 1 lb. sugar (confectioner's); 2 tsp. vanilla, 1 cup nuts. Slice cake in half to frost.

RIEGER BEGONIAS: This is one of our showiest plants, but it's also one of our easiest to get powdery mildew on the leaves. Best bet is to put the plant in a room where it gets good air circulation.

Also, when you water your plants, do not get any on the leaves.

Nutritionists suggest ways to avoid eating too much sugar:

- Cut down on the obvious items: bakery, confections, soft drinks.
- Provide fresh fruit, raw vegetables, popcorn or peanuts for snacks in lieu of sweets.
- Inspect contents of packaged foods for "hidden" sugar before you buy and use only one lump in your coffee or tea, or even better, none at all.

Watch for hidden sugar

By GAIL NEVINS
We must take the sweet with the sour, goes the old cliché, but according to medical findings of recent years we would do well to lessen the dose of sweetness where sugar is concerned.

The effects of highly refined sugar consumption on our health are manifold, encompassing heart disease, diabetes, tooth decay and obesity (which can predispose you to the aforementioned) plus gall bladder diseases, kidney and liver trouble.

Among many others, Dr. Roslyn B. Alfin-Slater, professor of nutrition and biological chemistry in UCLA's School of Public Health, urges moderation of sugar intake.

"Americans are probably eating more refined sugar than they should," she states. "Too much of anything is inadvisable and this applies to all excess calories, not just those from sugar."

Dr. Frederick J. State of Harvard's School of Public Health, contends that sugar is a good and consumed in moderation plays a useful role in our diet. He claims nothing wrong with a daily intake of about 15 per cent of sucrose (refined sugar) calories with our meals: a spoonful in coffee, a sprinkling on cereal or fruit.

Dr. Jean Mayer, the Harvard nutritionist who has long deplored the advertising and sales of dry breakfast cereals made with sugar, thinks that increasing sugar consumption by Americans may be a factor in genetically vulnerable diabetes victims.

But in today's world of mass produced foods it is harder than you may suppose to eliminate excessive amounts of "hidden" sucrose in snacks, candy, ice cream, pies and cakes that can run the total calorie count from sugar up to 24 or even 50 per cent of our diet.

It is also found in soups, pickles, corned beef hash, salad dressings, pickled beets, breakfast foods, hot dogs, ketchup, meat sauces, medical prescriptions and much more. Check the fine print contents of packaged groceries and surprise yourself.

A sampling of hidden sugar in processed foods can be found in the July issue of Science Digest.

It states: Federal regulations require that ingredients of packaged, canned and bottled food and drink be listed according to volume. So while it is not possible to tell what percentage of the total ingredients is sugar, one can get a rough idea of the quantities involved by noting how high sugar places in the volume listing.

In eight off-the-shelf grocery products, "hidden sugar"

Electric vehicles zip in increasing numbers

NEW YORK (UPI) — The electric motorcycle and small electric cars — particularly little gasoline vehicles like the Volkswagen converted to electric power — soon may find a fair market in the United States.

The electric golf cart and small electric trucks made by Westinghouse and other companies already are appearing in noticeable numbers around the country.

Corbin-Gentry, Inc., of Somersville, Conn., and Dallas, has been experimenting with the electric motorcycle since 1973 and recently brought out a kit to convert the Volkswagen from gasoline to electric power for folks who want to use the little beetle only for driving to and from the station or for local shopping.

Corbin-Gentry is a maker of components and accessories for gasoline powered motorcycles. The electric vehicle project is a new enterprise. Its present motorcycles and Volkswagen conversion kits employ ordinary lead-acid batteries giving a range of 35 to 45 miles and a top speed of about 30 miles an hour.

But spokesman Al Simmons said Corbin-Gentry hopes by 1977 to have a production model on the market of a motorcycle powered by a silver-zinc battery made by Yardney Electric Co., Pawcatuck, Conn. This bike would have a range of 150 miles and speeds of 50 miles an hour or better. Yardney is the company that attracted a lot of attention a few years ago by converting several small cars to electric motors and silver-zinc batteries and producing some impressive performance figures.

The silver-zinc battery is used primarily in aircraft and would have to be rented instead of purchased by users of motorcycles or small cars. Its purchase price would be prohibitive. But since the large silver content of the battery is fully recoverable at the end of its useful life, marketing on a rental basis is quite feasible, Simmons said.

The silver-zinc battery not only gives an electric vehicle more range and speed but it overcomes another obstacle. Electric vehicles fueled by lead-acid batteries are notoriously poor hill climbers. In the current Volkswagen conversion kit, Simmons said Corbin-Gentry gets around that difficulty by retaining the VW's clutch and transmission gears although, traditionally, electric vehicles have used direct drive.

But Corbin-Gentry recently demonstrated the hill climbing abilities of an electric motorcycle with silver-zinc battery at the Mt. Washington Alternative Vehicle Regatta over a course with an average 12 per cent grade.

But unless some scientist comes up with a radical and cheap new battery that will greatly improve their range, they will remain restricted to use for local shopping and driving to and from the station.

Teacher's notebook

School age extension invalid

By JUDITH GELBER

Major teacher organizations are busy fanning an educational spark they hope will turn into a satisfactory blaze in the near future: the idea of placing children in school at the age of three.

There isn't any doubt that the educational process — or at least preparation for academic success during the school years — begins very early in life. The family that places a high value on getting a formal education will actively support and encourage in its children a desire for learning with the first picture book, crayon, or story-telling time.

Programs like Head Start were specifically designed for pre-schoolers with a badly deficient background in just such educational stimuli and preparation. Research showed that the most successful students were those whose readiness for learning was established even in the toddler stage. It was hoped, therefore, that educationally-deprived children could be brought up to reasonable levels of learning readiness so that they too could look forward to a productive life.

Furthermore, it is now believed that many children are capable of learning complex material well before kindergarten age, and that fixing the ages of five and six as the traditional starting time for school is both arbitrary and outmoded in the light of current research findings.

There is enough evidence on hand, therefore, to anticipate a certain amount of success in placing three-year-olds in school and in expecting beneficial results. But the justifications for extending the school years offered by the teacher groups aren't in my opinion, valid.

The teacher spokesmen are quite candid in admitting that this proposal to extend the educational process is self-serving. With 178,000 teachers looking for jobs last year, any program that would create teaching jobs is highly welcome. Also, there are so many working mothers and so few day-care centers and baby-sitting services that having schools in which to place children would be a great financial boon to countless families and the economy in general.

However, are the need to create teaching jobs and the desirability of providing baby-sitting services for working mothers sufficient reasons for revamping our educational system? And is the question of who should control this program — the schools or private community groups — really the basic issue, rather than the program itself, as the teacher organizations and their supporters are now insisting?

I believe the crucial question is whether we want our children to spend nearly all of their first 18 years in school when so much of family life and its responsibilities has already been taken over by so many governmental and educational institutions.

Surely, the stability of the family isn't enhanced when we separate ourselves from our children at earlier and earlier ages, particularly when we don't know what the psychological costs will be to both the parent and the child.

Bloom faded on Portuguese carnation

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — The military opened Portugal's revolution 15 months ago with a red carnation as its symbol. Many Portuguese today say the bloom has faded and all they see is red.

The key to their distress was the military rulers' decision two weeks ago to replace the political parties gradually with a mass movement and a "people's democracy."

Although praised by the minority Communists and the extreme left, the move brought the military more than it bargained for.

The country's two biggest political parties—the Socialists

Mobs have already started to attack local Communist headquarters in several regions of the country, beating up the leftists and wrecking their facilities. This could be just a forerunner of what is to come.

In the north, people now openly talk about rebellion against the military. Full-scale independence movements are gaining impetus in the Alarve on the south coast and on the Azores islands in the mid-Atlantic.

The military has reacted to the deterioration with a flood of statements, appealing for unity and threatening to use force against civil disturbances.

The current confrontation is the culmination of a string of crises, dating back to January, that has gradually isolated the military from the country's non-Communist forces.

The military has reacted to each of these crises by taking the country farther to the left. Politicians predict the ruling Revolutionary Council will decide on a similar solution for this one.

This time, they say, the shift could carry the Armed Forces Movement past the traditional Communist party into the camp of the Socialist Left Movement, an extreme left group of intellectuals with an unclear philosophy.

The key to this move would be the ouster of Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves, who has the strong support of the Communist party.

Pressure for the prime minister's removal has been mounting within the military because of his apparent inability to resolve the multiple social, political and economic problems besieging the country.

Socialist leader Mario Soares was censured by the military when he called for Goncalves' ouster at a rally, but the military's reassertion of support for the prime minister did little to still the predictions that his days are numbered.

Technology invades supermarket

Computer consumer aid?

NEW YORK (UPI) — The brave new technological world for the supermarket shopper is on its way, but consumers and others involved in the computerization have questions about the assorted effects it will have.

The meat and potatoes questions are: Will consumers still be able to shop for the best buys? Will consumers rebel when prices no longer are marked on each item? Will changes mean savings for the shopper?

Some of the answers are in, some will come as a uniform system of marking grocery products spreads nationally.

Changes involve something as simple as little lines stamped by the supermarket on grocery products, something the food industry calls the Universal Product Code, UPC, established in 1973, is a uniform system of marking the size, brand and retail price of items.

UPC consists of a series of vertical bars of varying width which can be translated by a laser scanner into computer-readable numbers. Instead of the familiar cash register, the checker simply pulls a UPC-marked product across the scanner, transforming the bar symbol into a UPC code number.

These figures are transmitted to the store's minicomputer file for a determination of the price of a product. In a millisecond, the price is displayed visually to both the consumer and the checker. At the same time, a description of the product and its price is printed on the customer's register tape.

The system can give customers a list of the products, departments, prices, coupons or food stamps used, taxable and nontaxable items, time and checkout lane. For the market, the information supplies a running inventory of goods in stock.

So much for the technical system, so far being used in only 12 of the nearly 50,000 markets in the United States, says Grover A. Howard, assistant professor of social science at Rio Hondo college, Whittier, Calif.

Professor Howard looks at the whole matter of technology and what it means to the shopper in an article "Future Shock in the Supermarket".

The article appears in the current "The Futurist," publication of World Future Society, a nonprofit educational and scientific organization founded in 1966.

And although the number of markets now using it is small, many in the grocery industry accept total computerization in the next five years. It could mean job loss for retail clerks but a cost slash of 20 to 50 per cent on food distribution.

There are bugs. And there is the matter of consumer acceptance.

Howard cited one market's troubles finding stickers that would remain glued to frozen foods, milk cartons and soft containers. Variable-weight items such as meat and produce created further problems with symbols.

Customers complained that the system took longer, there were overcharges for some items, and computer pricing didn't always register the reduced cost of specials. But as technical problems were solved, the market found consumer resistance lessening.

Howard said the most controversial innovation was the new method of indicating prices. Since UPC contains all the information the computer needs, some stores have tried to stop the laborious and costly task of individual pricing. Prices instead simply are posted on the shelf next to the product.

But shoppers are accustomed to looking at a product and seeing how much it costs.

EAST STROUDSBURG — The 13th annual antique show and sale sponsored by the Auxiliary to the General Hospital of Monroe County will be held Aug. 6, 7 and 8 in the auditorium of the East Stroudsburg High School.

The show will be open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday and from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday.

The show will present a wide variety of antiques featuring 40 dealers from seven states.

The show will have a new flavor this year in the kitchen. The auxiliary will post a different international menu on each day of the show.

Wednesday will be French Day, Thursday, Italian Day and Friday, U.S.A. Day.

French Day will feature crepes stuffed with asparagus and ham with cheese sauce and a green salad. Italian Day's menu will be spaghetti with meat sauce, a hard roll and butter and a green salad.

For U.S.A. Day, the auxiliary will serve hot dogs with sauerkraut or chili and barbeque on a roll. Apple pie will be the All-American dessert.

A standard menu of sandwiches — tuna salad, ham and cheese, and turkey — will be available daily along with potato salad. Desserts homemade by auxiliary members will also be sold. There will be no separate bake sale this year.

All kitchen work will be volunteered by auxiliary members. Chairman of the dining room is Mrs. Todd R. Williams.

The antique dealers in the show will feature such goods as period and country furniture, toys, dolls and one-of-a-kind antiques.

Show coordinator is Mrs. John C. Ferrebee; Mrs. Francis W. Armitage is antique show general chairman. Show treasurer is Mrs. George W. Richard. Auxiliary president is Mrs. John H. Parker.

Tickets to the show are $1.50. Discount tickets (for 25 cents off) are available at several area businesses. All proceeds go to the hospital.

It also explains what should be done if a child is suspected of not developing as he should, and contains basic information on infant programs, and what parents can expect from infant stimulation.

The importance of identifying and helping special children in the critical first few years of life is the emphasis of FIRST STEP and the brochure is part of a continuing public education program. Hot ideas for pot holders

By PHYLLIS FIAROTTA

Pot holders are practically indispensable and our handy-dandy hand-savers can add a whimsical touch to kitchen chores. They make perfect gifts for home or church bazaar, too.

Felt is the fabric recommended, but any other sturdy fabric will do. Appliques can be made from any fabric and can be sewn with a running stitch or special attachments on your sewing machine. Stuffing is either cotton or polyester. Felt pot holder seams require no additional refinishing since felt doesn't fray. Add bias tape over fabric seams.

BASIC POT HOLDER (1)

The basic pot holder is one unit with a loop for hanging. This type holder is usually square and quilted, but any simple design can be used. Shown is a tomato, but try your hand with other vegetables, fruits, or flowers.

1. Cut two red tomato shapes and one green leaf.
2. Place an even layer of stuffing between the two tomato shapes and sew together.
3. Sew the green leaf to the tomato through all layers of fabric.
4. Add a looped ribbon or a felt strip for hanging.

TWO-HAND HOLDER (2)

This holder is a two-in-one, ideal for casseroles or other oven receptacles, because your hands are protected and the hot dish is literally encased in fabric, which protects your body as well.

1. Cut two rectangles 24 inches long and 6 inches wide. Round off the corners.

2. Cut two rectangles 8 1/2 inches long and 6 inches wide. Round corners exactly as with the longer shapes. Sew a 1/2-inch hem (only on fabric other than felt) all the way around.

3. Sew an egg applique consisting of a large white circle and a little orange circle on one end and two red with pink strip bacon shapes crisscrossing on the other end.

4. Place an even layer of stuffing between the longer shapes, design side facing out.
5. Place the smaller shapes over the larger stuffed shape, round sides flushing and the hemmed side facing down.

6. Sew the three layers together around the entire outer edge. Hands slip into open "pockets" on holder.

DOUBLE POT HOLDER (3)

This is a double-size pot holder that is folded in half, giving you double protection. Take advantage of the fold by making a talking animal.

1. Cut two 6 x 12 inch rectangles.
2. On the right half of one shape create a silly face. Add a bottom lip and a tongue (see insert) to the left side of the remaining shape so it completes the face.

3. Add a thin, even layer of stuffing between the two shapes, applique sides facing out, and sew together.

4. Fold the holder in half and stitch across the top, 1/4 inch down, to keep the two shapes folded.

5. Sew on two ears to the face.

MITT POT HOLDERS (4)

The mitt pot holder fits your hand like a glove. This holder is great for gripping.

1. Place your hand with the thumb extended on a piece of paper. Add two inches extra around the hand as well as around the wrist. Use this pattern to cut four shapes.

2. Sew on a silly face applique to one mitt shape.

3. Place an even layer of stuffing between every two mitt shapes.

4. Place the two stuffed units together. Fold under about 1 inch of edge at the wrist into the glove for a hem.

5. Sew the mitt together ending at the wrists.

HANDLE SLEEVES (5)

This little pot holder slips over hot handles.

1. Cut four rectangles 3 inches wide and 7 inches long.

2. Sew on decorative appliques to one shape.

3. Assemble and sew as you did the mitt.

Cantaloupe season now

NEW YORK — One of the delights of the exotic Nile cruises of Cleopatra and Mark Antony may well have been sweet, juicy cantaloupes. Egyptian art as far back as 2400 B.C. (well before Cleopatra's time) depicts the ancestors of today's cantaloupe.

The cantaloupe we know in America originated in Persia (now Iran). But the name of this delicious melon comes from the name of a castle — Cantalupo — where the fruit was first grown in Italy. Christopher Columbus introduced them to Americans on his second voyage to the New World, in 1494.

Cantaloupes are in season now (the season runs from May through September), reports the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) and can make delicious additions to summer meals. Served with thin slices of Italian prosciutto, they can be used for an elegant first course. Filled with cottage cheese, a half melon is a filling, low-calorie lunch. To use it as a dessert, try filling a half melon with ice cream, or chunks of other fruits.

Cantaloupes make a snack anytime; it is high in Vitamin A and low in calories. (Half of a 5" cantaloup has 60 calories.)

Now that you know its value, and have some ideas about what to do with it, you want to be sure to choose your melon wisely.

USDA marketing specialists say selecting a melon for maximum quality and flavor is tricky, and there is no absolute formula.

There are three major signs of full maturity:

— The stem should be gone, leaving a smooth, symmetrical shallow basin.

— The netting, or veining, should be thick, coarse, and corky.

— The skin color between the netting should have changed from green to a yellowish-buff, yellowish gray, or pale yellow.

Ann Landers

Happy libber

Dear Ann Landers: I am happily married and have been for 15 years. I believe in equality for women; I'm my own boss and I do as I please.

My husband and I disagree a lot, but we seldom fight. I sometimes worry that our marriage is too happy and something unexpected will happen to spoil it. I believe we owe our marital success to the fact that we respect each other's opinions, needs and desires.

My reason for writing is to comment on the newlywed whose husband refused to cut his toenails. She signed her letter, "Bleeding Angles." You suggested that she give him a pedicure.

Your answer elevated my blood pressure at least 50 points! The thought of a woman down on her knees cutting a man's toenails (which he was obviously too lazy to do) sparked rebellion in me.

I suggest she tell him to sleep by himself until he cuts his own toenails. Honey may catch more flies than vinegar. Ann, but absence makes the heart grow fonder — especially for newlyweds. —

Happily Married Libber

Dear Lib: To get down on one's knees can be a very good thing — whether to pray, scrub a floor or cut a husband's toenails.

When you stand, you are a little taller for the experience.

Dear Ann Landers: What do you think of a father who sits like a bump on a log and pretends he is deaf when you are reprimanding one of the children?

In our family, I have always done the reprimanding because my husband worked nights while they were growing up and was never around when "things happened." I feel I've done a good job. No child of ours has ever been in trouble or become involved with drugs.

Last Saturday I told my 18-year-old son to get a haircut. Jim's hair was not long, just ragged. I had been telling him for a week to get it cut. Jim is very handy, especially with cars. Someone always needs his car fixed and off Jim goes. Well, Saturday morning I said, "Get it today, Jim." He insisted he had work to do. When I said, "No excuses. Get it today," he shouted an obscene word at me. His father just sat there.

I am angry at my husband. VERY ANGRY. For not calling the boy back and reprimanding him. Please Ann, how can I make my husband understand it's part of his job to help me?

Helpless

Dear H.: Sorry dear, but the discipline pattern is firmly established in your home and it's too late to change. Just hang in there. Mom, and keep on doing what you're doing. Be thankful you are equal to the challenge. Some mothers with "uninvolved" husbands can't hack it and their kids are plenty messed up.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I love company. We invite two couples to our home for dinner almost every other week. Usually it's the six of us, sometimes it's just four. I'm a gourmet cook and enjoy putting together a fine meal.

They never invite us back. This has been going on for well over five months. When they leave, the women rave about my cooking and say, "You MUST come to our house next time." Then they add, "Of course, I can't cook like you ..."

What should I do, Ann? I'm beginning to feel like a chump.

Suzette Crepe

Dear Sue: The next time you get that song and dance say, "I accept your invitation. I'll phone you tomorrow and we'll pick a date. It's time we ate at YOUR house. I don't care WHAT YOU SERVE."

CONFIDENTIAL to Mine Or His?: Laws vary from state to state. In some areas "misrepresentation" is grounds for annulment. Let this be a lesson to you. Next time don't go husband-hunting with a geiger-counter.

What's prudish? What's O.K.? If you aren't sure, you need some help. It's available in the booklet: "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Mail your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Earache and teeth

I have had constant and excruciating pain in my left ear. I've been told that the whole trouble lies in my teeth. Could this be possible?

Miss D.F., Wash., D.C.

Dear Miss F.:

It is indeed possible. A frequent cause of earache is traceable to the change in the "bite" of the teeth.

In the absence of any intrinsic disease of the ears, changes in the jaw joint are always considered as a possible source of the pain.

The jaw joint is a highly sensitive one and reflects any imbalance in the bite of the teeth. A small sac in the jaw joint, known as a "bursa," can become inflamed and irritated when the bite is off balance.

The nerve that goes to the tender jaw joint has branches that run to the ear drum, the ear canal and even down the neck and shoulder. The result is that pain from a jaw joint disturbance may be referred to other parts of the head, the neck and the ears.

Sometimes it is very difficult for dentists to pick up tiny variations in the bite that affect the jaw joint. It then becomes necessary to do highly specialized X-ray studies of the jaw joint and the bite occlusion of the teeth.

There are specialists who devote themselves exclusively to this problem, which is called "temporo-mandibular joint disease."

With readjustment of the bite, planned exercise of the jaw, replacement of missing teeth, repair of poor fitting dentures and total evaluation of the dental status, the severe pain that you describe can usually be eliminated.

What is meant by the "mask of pregnancy"?

Mrs. L.I., Iowa

Dear Mrs. I.:

Occasionally, a brownish discoloration appears on the cheeks of a pregnant woman. This facial blemish, known as "chloasma," is temporary and almost always disappears after the child is born.

It is suspected that a temporary imbalance of the hormones that normally circulate in the body may occur during pregnancy and account for this condition.

S. Korean solons to look important

By JAMES KIM

SEOUL, Korea (UPI) — South Korean lawmakers have lost much of their once mighty powers, but come September they will enjoy an appearance of grandeur when they move into a new parliament building.

Right now the National Assembly meets in a converted theater.

The new Parliament House, located on the Yoido islet in the Han River winding through southern Seoul, will be the largest and best equipped single building in the country. It is to be completed by Aug. 15, the 30th anniversary of Korea's liberation from Japan.

Standing on an 82-acre site which will eventually include a library and a legislators' office building, the new parliament structure took five years and more than $28 million to build.

It rises 230 feet and houses more than 260 rooms on six floors above ground and two below ground. Top government officials will also have their rooms there.

A rectangular structure of granite, marble, and concrete, mostly produced at home, it features 24 stone pillars supporting the roof capped by a dome. The building is described as a mixture of the doric, romanesque and renaissance styles and traditional Korean architecture.

The present National Assembly of South Korea is a one-house parliament. The new building, however, envisions a day when the nation will have two houses of parliament. It has a main hall for the lower house, or the assembly, with 300 seats, and another for the upper house with 100 seats.

Roll calls or voting will be computerized, putting an end to hand raising and counting. There will be facilities for simultaneous translation of debates in five languages, if necessary, and officials say this would make it a convenient venue for international gatherings.

When the National Assembly moves to the new building, it will leave behind a history of political upheavals that marred the nation since its independence.

When Korea was liberated from Japanese rule at the end of World War II Aug. 15, 1945, U.S. forces occupied South Korea and Russia moved into North Korea under a war-time agreement. In 1948 South Korea set up its own government.

The National Assembly met at the capitol building in downtown Seoul previously used as the Japanese governor's office. The North Korean invasion in 1950-53 badly damaged the capitol, and parliament had to convene in a nearby former theater, where it has sat ever since.

It was at this assembly building that lawmakers had to chart a new constitutional law and elect a new head of state and chief executive to succeed President Syngman Rhee who was overthrown in student uprisings in April, 1960.

It was here also that the National Assembly had to face the temporary death of parliamentary democracy in the coup of May 16, 1961, led by then army Maj. Gen. Park Chung-hee.

Civil government was restored in 1963, and Park was subsequently popularly elected to the presidency and has since ruled the nation.

It was again at the same old building that the National Assembly was dissolved, the constitution suspended, and political activities banned temporarily in a special decree issued by Park on Oct. 17, 1972.

The new constitution empowered the president to handpick one-third of the 219-seat National Assembly. Under the new law, the president was to be elected by an electoral college called the National Conference for Unification to a six-year term.

The down-graded assembly lost much of its previous powers. Park has said his new government system is needed to shore up national security without confusion and cope with North Korean threats of aggression.

Carved on the wall beside the main entrance to the new parliament building is a message of dedication:

"This house is a lookout for our nation aspiring to unification, and a monument of history promising prosperity, and eternally carries our will and heritage in this age to all future generations of the nation."

Saintly protector

CARACAS (UPI) — St. George, the British saint of dragon fame, is also honored as one of the protectors of Venezuela's capital.

He was named a protector of Caracas in 1597 when the town asked the intercession of a saint to stop a plague of worms which had been devastating Venezuela's wheat crop.

Lying mouth

By Jean Adams

BIG MOUTH PLUS: (Q.) I talked too much. I told my girl friend a lie about Wesley and she told him. He called me and told me it was all over. That was last year.

Now we are talking again, but that is all. I want him back. In September he will leave for college and I am sure he will forget me. What can I do?

Afraid in Texas (A.) At college Wesley, if he is like most freshmen, will be lonesome and homesick — at least for a while. Offer to write to him. Ask him to write to you.

you. This should help to keep you in his thoughts.

Also, before he leaves, assure him that you have learned a lesson.

A big mouth is bad; a big, lying mouth is doubly bad.

NO DATES: (Q.) I never had any luck with any girl. As soon as a girl finds out I like her she gets uptight with me, so I haven't been able to get any dates. I like this girl named Nicole but I have never talked to her because I haven't had any occasion to.

She had a girl friend who hated me, so I am afraid she hates me too. They don't hang around together any longer and I've thought about asking Nicole for a date, but am afraid she would say no. What do you think I am doing wrong?

Ineffective in Indiana (A.) You are being negative. You are getting uptight about yourself, putting a negative rating on yourself. This is contagious. Girls sense it in you and react in kind.

Relax, take it easy, hope, expect, smile, tell yourself, "I can!"

Practice doing all this a few days. Then talk to Nicole about a date. She will probably like the positive way you talk.

90 seek planner position

STROUDSBURG — The personnel committee of the county planning and zoning commission has narrowed the number of applicants it is considering for the job of planning administrator from 90 to 40.

Commission member Robert MacMillan said he expected the number of applicants would be reduced further when they were told the salary scale for the position.

"Some applicants are beyond our range and are making $25,000 to $30,000 now. The salary would eliminate some right away," MacMillan said.

Earlier this month county commissioners told the committee that an administrator who has just completed school should have a starting salary between $9,500 and $10,000.

MacMillan explained the applicants had been divided into five categories which had been further divided.

"Salary limitations will be a major factor for many in the first level. I'd be surprised to see one man in Florida leave a larger size community to come here for less money, unless there are other considerations," MacMillan said.

He suggested that the committee send letters to the applicants describing the salary and area in more detail in hopes some would no longer be interested.

"If we could whittle the group down to a handful by being specific about the area, we would rule out those who are just looking for a new job," he said.

"We want those who want very much to have a job here. In a sense, we could play hard to get by mail," MacMillan added.

He told the commission the committee intended to interview about five or six applicants and suggested other commission members assist in the interviews.

He added they had received applications from Florida, Chicago, Iran and Moose Lake, Me., but said most applicants live within 200 miles of here.

The commission agreed to give the committee the "flexibility" it felt it needed to provide for possible travel expenses and long distance phone calls.

Vincent Feeney has been acting administrator since Douglas E. Williams resigned from his $13,656 position to run for county commissioner in the May primary.

Sidewalk days begin in S-burg

STROUDSBURG — Approximately 50 downtown Stroudsburg merchants will be participating in the annual Sidewalk Days beginning today at 9:30 a.m.

The Pocono Mountains Jaycees will be participating in the Sidewalk Sales on Thursday, Friday and Saturday with a stand in front of the Penn Stroud Hilton. Seventh and Main Streets, Stroudsburg.

The stand is to acquaint the community with the local chapter of Jaycees and what they do for the community. Pictures of recent projects will be on display. Car dealer responds to charges

ALLENTOWN — A Northampton County used car dealer, previously accused of selling cars without valid titles, has agreed not to make false statements concerning the ownership of any vehicle, Bureau of Consumer Protection Director Joel Weisberg announced today.

Aaron E. Ostrander, Jr., President of Motor World Brokers, Inc., of R.D. 1, Route 191, Nazareth, did not acknowledge any wrongdoing in signing a consent agreement.

The agreement was filed in Northampton County Common Pleas Court today by Deputy Attorney General Judith A. Brown, attorney-in-charge of the Bureau's Lehigh Valley office.

The dealer also agreed to satisfy all consumers who complained to the Bureau of Consumer Protection. He promised to provide titles to purchasers of all previously sold motor vehicles within 15 days.

Manor staff shifted to find administrator

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Commissioners Monday approved reclassification of a Pleasant Valley Manor employee from administrative assistant to assistant administrator.

The commissioners acted on a request from James Berger, who had been administrative assistant to Mrs. Norma Gould, acting administrator.

Commissioner William Quinn said the action was taken with the thought of eventually making Berger administrator if he passes a state test for administrators.

Currently, the county is considering four applications to be administrator of the county home. Mrs. Gould has applied for temporary licensing as administrator but the license expires in six months.

Quinn said if a licensed administrator is not hired within six months, the county would have to assume all operating expenses because it would not qualify for federal funding. He added that Berger is well qualified and he sees no reason why there would be no licensed administrator hired within six months.

Commissioner Arlington Martin said if no licensed administrator is hired in six months, Mrs. Gould will take the test to become licensed.

Area Eagle

STROUDSBURG — Harold Edinger of Stroudsburg has been named as a committeeman to the 77th Annual International Convention of the Fraternal Order of Eagles to be held Aug. 6-9 in Dallas, Texas.

Over 10,000 Eagle delegates and their wives are expected to flock to Dallas for the convention and the committeeman will play an important role in the conduct of the convention. There are a total of 400 committeemen.

DRBC hearing on dam ends with 100 on record

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — After two days of testimony from more than 100 witnesses, the Delaware River Basin Commission Wednesday wrapped up hearings here on the controversial Tocks Island Lake Project.

It is now up to the governors of New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Delaware to decide whether to recommend that Congress go ahead with the project which calls for a dam and a lake project to provide water resources to the area. They are scheduled to meet July 31 in Newark, N.J.

and review testimony from the hearings, finally giving Congress a decision by August 28.

Congress ordered a halt to the long proposed project last August to allow time for a one-year review of the proposal. The New York consulting firms of URS-Madigan-Praeger, Inc and Conklin & Rossant did a review of the project and issued a report last month.

Testimony for and against the project was well balanced throughout the hearings, with most testimony coming from organizations or residents of New Jersey and concerning

New Jersey's water supply.

Among those opposing the project were the New York State Sierra Club, Save the Delaware Coalition and the Pennsylvania Environmental Defense. The Sierra Club said the consequences of the project would be "tragic."

Philadelphia Water Commissioner Carmen Guarino also testified Wednesday and urged the commission to proceed with the creation of the project, noting that it would protect water quality in the lower Delaware River and keep oceanic salt water out of Philadelphia's water intake during time of drought or lowered river flows.

He called the project the "most economical and least environmentally detrimental."

New Jersey environmental protection commissioner David J. Bardin who chaired the hearings threw skeptical questions at many of the opponents of the project asking them, "How do we get water if we don't build Tocks Island?"

S-burg considers plan for one-way Sarah

STROUDSBURG — A plan to make Sarah Street a one-way street west-bound was discussed by the Stroudsburg Borough Council Wednesday.

No decisions will be made until after a state Department of Transportation (PennDOT) traffic patterns is completed. The study will be done after the Sarah Street extension opens in September.

Borough planning consultant Victor Rodite described a 1970 vintage traffic plan which called for an inner loop and an outer loop of traffic in the downtown area.

The outer loop would consist of Sarah Street westbound and Ann Street eastbound. The inner loop would consist of Monroe Street, Eighth Street and Sixth Street.

Rodite said the plan was rejected at the time because Ann Street did not provide sufficient turning radius for trucks and buses.

The planner recommended council ask PennDOT to do an origin-destination study before any changes are made. He also recommended a period of experimentation before changes are made final.

Firemen present objected to making Sarah Street one-way, saying it would reduce response time to fire calls.

In discussing the possibility of a fire on Seventh Street, assistant fire chief Richard Doleiden said it would be illegal for the fire trucks to travel the wrong way on a one-way street, no matter how short the distance.

"If there is an accident," Doleiden told council, "we are at fault and you fellows are liable for it because you own our equipment."

Borough Manager Ralph Bender said he's heard several complaints from Thomas and Scott Street residents who feared a one-way Sarah Street would increase traffic on their streets because of people turning around the block.

He said they expressed concern about the safety of the children in the all-residential area. Sarah Street is part residential and part commercial.

Tocks trash tally no trifle trickle

By FLIP DeLUCA
Pocono Record Reporter

DELAWARE WATER GAP — Garbage in the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area (DWGNRA) would increase eight-fold if the Tocks Island Dam is built.

The National Park Service (NPS) currently collects about 10 cubic yards a day and nearly twice as much on weekends. It costs $2,600 a week to collect and dispose of the trash, according to Charles Atwood, chief of maintenance for NPS at Delaware Water Gap.

If the dam is built, it is estimated garbage would accumulate at rate of 8.5 tons a day to start, and reach 23 tons a day when the project is completed.

The current daily rate of 10 cubic yards amounts to about 2.5 tons.

Atwood said the garbage is brought to main collection centers by park service workers. It is then picked up by private collectors in Pennsylvania and New Jersey and hauled to landfills.

Atwood said he expects the amount of garbage will remain about the same for the next five years or until construction of the dam begins, if Congress approves the project.

He said the park service currently has contracts with private waste haulers and that if the dam is built, more haulers will be hired to transport the trash.

According to the final study on Tocks Island, prepared for Congress by USS-Madigan-Praeger Inc., and Conklin and Rossant, over 158,000 visitors are expected to use the recreation area on any summer Sunday once the dam is built.

Each person is expected to leave behind an average of .3 of a pound of garbage per day.

An additional 550 tons of rubbish is expected to be generated by the visitors outside the park area. This will be disposed of by municipal or private haulers in the seven-county region of the recreation area, the study states.

For comparison, Monroe County accumulates a maximum of 100 tons of garbage on a peak summer day, according to Joseph Hopkins, co-owner of Pocotran Inc., the county's only trash transfer station.

Hopkins said the transfer station could handle about 200 tons of garbage a day.

The trash is transported to a landfill site in Northampton County because Monroe County does not have a landfill site of its own.

A 50-acre tract of land near Bartonsville was given serious consideration several months ago but has been nearly forgotten, according to James E. Cadue, Jr., executive director of the Monroe County General Authority.

Cadue said the general authority has "turned its sites to resource recovery." He said this involves recycling of several metals, wood and glass and selling the product.

The authority is considering two recycling proposals, one in Sussex County (N.J.) and the other in Northampton County. Recycling would offer a more economical alternative to landfills, especially if the dam was built, Cadue said.

Vandalism suspects sought

STROUDSBURG — Less than $200 damage was done to the Stroudsburg Pool, the Morey Elementary School and the Junior-Senior High School early Tuesday night by vandals, according to Stroudsburg Police Chief John Baujan.

Baujan said there are several suspects and that the investigation is continuing. No arrests have yet been made.

Police discovered what was described as "a mess" in the Stroudsburg Pool early Tuesday evening. Baujan said the vandals had attempted to throw a bench into the pool. They had also dumped three waste containers in, allowing the contents to spill out.

Borough Manager Ralph Bender said there were soda bottles and candy wrappers floating in the pool. "And what didn't float sank to the bottom and plugged the drains," he said.

The police chief said a couple of broken windows at the north side of the Morey School was discovered by the 1 p.m. police patrol.

Then, Wednesday morning at 9 a.m. school personnel discovered a five gallon can of floor cleaner wax had been dumped on the floor. Police said there had been no forcible entry into the school.

The crimes, termed "criminal mischief" are summary offenses.

Baujan said the maximum penalty for the offense is up to 90 days in jail and a $300 fine.

Bender reported all pool activities for the morning were suspended while borough employees cleaned the pool. The pool was open for public use in the afternoon.

Shuttermaster still upset

School claims photo rift settled

STROUDSBURG — A charge that a Stroudsburg High School teacher used his influence as yearbook advisor to secure a contract with a photography firm he worked for may wind up in the courts, according to the photographer making the allegation.

Lawrence L. Levy, owner of Lawrence Studio in Stroudsburg, has rekindled his charge that teacher Morris W. Frace influenced students to contract with Lens Art of Bangor instead with Levy.

Levy, who last year obtained the job of taking senior portraits and providing pictures for the yearbook, said Frace's persuasion did him out of a $10,000 job, not the differences between the produce delivered by the two photography studios.

Stating his firm offers the same quality, service and price as Lens Art, Levy said, "I'm fighting to have them (school board members and administrators) remove him as advisor because of a conflict of interest. I may even sue him for — what it would be called is trade libel."

But an administrator says Frace will remain as advisor, and Frace forcefully denies Levy's accusations.

"His allegations are unfounded and untrue," he said. "I do weddings as a subcontractor (for Lens Art), but I do not work for Lens Art."

Last month Levy charged that Frace told a committee of 24 students working on the yearbook that Lens Art would provide better and cheaper service than Levy.

Frace and yearbook editor Betsy Baumgardner have denied that.

Levy also claimed that Frace and the committee discriminated against him when they scheduled his sales pitch on moving up day. "When I spoke to them," Levy said, "I spoke to seven students."

The committee said it chose Lens Art by itself, with no pressure from Frace, because the firm offered the best service.

Levy questioned whether an out of town firm will show up to take the free group and candid shots for the yearbook.

A company is chosen to take senior portraits and traditionally agrees to provide free pictures for the students' yearbook.

John T. Kupice, assistant superintendent in charge of the high school, said scheduling of pictures is satisfactory.

Kupice said an investigation conducted by himself showed no conflict of interest. "Mr. Frace will be our yearbook advisor."

Frace also denied a charge that he told students if they did not have their portraits done by Lens Art, their pictures would not be included in the yearbook.

He said he did not consider the situation a conflict of interest because he had been asked to work for Levy when Levy was doing the senior pictures.

Levy replied, "He (Frac) wasn't yearbook advisor then."

Developers seek injunction to keep contractor outside

STROUDSBURG — The developers of Arrowhead Lake are seeking a court order to keep a Pocono Lake contractor out of the development, according to an injunction request filed Wednesday in the Monroe County Prothonotary's Office.

All American Realty petitioned the Monroe County Court to enjoin contractor Darwin Keiper from trespassing on the development property and from violating regulations governing work permits.

There is currently pending a court suit involving All American and Keiper in which Keiper has asked payment of $4,641 to cover four excavating jobs he allegedly lost because the developers refused to issue him a work permit.

In late May, Keiper entered the development and began a job. When asked to leave by the development manager, he complied.

All American asserts that on June 2 and several dates since, Keiper has worked in the development and has refused to leave when asked to do so.

The petition to the court asks that Keiper be commanded to "cease and desist" from any trespassing on Arrowhead Lake property and from performing work without a permit.

$4 million approved for park

OTTAWA NEWS SERVICE
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The House passed a $4.2 billion interior appropriations bill Wednesday which includes more than $4 million for the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area (DWGNRA). The vote was 417-8.

If the Senate approves the bill and it is signed into law, as expected, the National Park Service should have enough money available to purchase the remaining tracts of land within the park site.

The bill specifically provides $3 million for land acquisition at the park, $366,400 for maintenance, $218,400 for visitor protection and safety, $140,000 for park management and administration, $130,000 for interpretative services, $104,100 for resource management, and $42,000 for bicentennial and special events.

Earlier this year the National Park Service transferred another $2 million into the DWGNRA account to supplement the land acquisition funds provided in the interior appropriations bill.

Arrowhead Lake has a building code which governs all construction in the development. The regulations are established "to protect property owners . . . from poor construction work."

The developers maintain that Keiper is familiar with their regulations that "no contractor or workman may enter the premises without first securing a work permit."

The injunction petition states if the building code is not enforced, the property value in the development will drop because there will be "no control over the quality of work performed in the development."

Both All American Realty

and Keiper agree the dispute over the permits stems from a past incident when a septic system was installed. Keiper maintains he did the work in accordance with specifications and percolation requirements of All American but that the septic system didn't function properly.

The homeowner in question complained to the developers who had the work done over and then sent Keiper the bill which he refuses to pay.

W. Brian Golden, Keiper's attorney, said Wednesday the decision of the court on the injunction request will have a major impact on the outcome of the civil suit.

Suicide victim

POCONO TOWNSHIP — The man who died after he stepped out in front of an on-coming truck at the intersection of Routes 380 and 80 Tuesday evening has been identified as Thomas G. LaGuardia, Jr., 21, of 984 Pleasant Drive, New Milford, N.J.

Monroe County Coroner Daniel G. Warner ruled the death a vehicular suicide due to massive injuries to the head and chest. He said LaGuardia was killed instantly.

LaGuardia was a runaway from the Lions Veterans Administration Hospital, Lions, N.J. Warner said his body was released to the Boulevard Funeral Home, New Milford, N.J.

The truck driver was Randall Willey of Ambsbury, Me., who was driving for the Mid-West Coast Trucking Company.

Burglary investigated

CRESCO — State police at Swiftwater investigated a burglary Tuesday at Log Cabin Lodge on Rte. 447 in Price Township.

Police said burglars entered the lodge by breaking a rear window and then stole a television set and a two-piece pool cue valued at $880. Damage was also reported to several coin-operated machines.

The incident is still under investigation.

Auto burglarized

MINISINK HILLS — A night at the Holiday Inn for Daniel Gross, 41, of Ephrata was no holiday.

Gross woke up at the motel in Minisink Hills Monday and discovered his car had been burglarized.

Police said Gross reported a calculator and some important papers missing. Police are still investigating.

Jukebox rifled

HENRYVILLE — Burglars broke into the Henryville House on Rtes. 715 and 191 in Henryville Monday, but only stole $3 after breaking a jukebox.

Police said the burglars entered the building by jimmying a sliding door in the barroom.

Court bound

MOUNT POCONO — Two men were bound over for court action Wednesday on charges of robbery and conspiracy in a preliminary hearing before District Magistrate Clara Pope.

Robert Gray of Cresco and John Bowman of Swiftwater were arrested July 6 for allegedly robbing Muldoon's Service Station, Scotrun.

Both men are free on $5,000 bail each.

Theft charged

MOUNT POCONO — A Bangor man was bound over for grand jury action Wednesday on a charge of theft.

After a preliminary hearing before District Magistrate Clara Pope, Russell Lobb of Bangor was released on $1,000 bail.

Lobb allegedly attempted to steal a motorcycle from Thomas Heller in Middle Smithfield Township last December.

Schmidt squeezes
Phils' 3-2 victory

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Mike Schmidt squeezed home pinch-runner Terry Harmon in the eighth inning Wednesday night to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 3-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Greg Luzinski opened the rally with a single and stole second. Harmon ran for Luzinski and reached third when Dick Allen grounded to first. Schmidt then beat out a bunt to the mound with Harmon scoring without a play.

Jim Lonborg struck out three and scattered six hits to win his eighth game in 14 decisions.

The Phillies scored in the first when Dave Cash singled, stole second, was sacrificed to third by Larry Bowa and scored on Jay Johnstone's groundout.

Philadelphia added a run in the second when Schmidt singled, took second on a passed ball, stole third and scored on Bob Boone's squeeze bunt.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — John Montefusco went the distance on a sixhitter and contributed a solo home run to a 10-hit attack Wednesday in helping the San Francisco Giants to a 10-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Run scoring singles by Gary Matthews and Willie Montanez and a three-run homer by Chris Speier staked Montefusco to a 5-0 lead in the first inning and the young Giants' righthander had a shutout until the seventh when Bill Madlock's double scored Chicago's only run. Madlock also drove in the second Chicago run in the ninth with a sacrifice fly.

BRODEHEADVILLE — Unconfirmed speculation has it that Pleasant Valley High School may have a new basketball coach after the Pleasant Valley School District school board meets tonight.

District Superintendent John Nye said he didn't know if the matter would come up at the meeting, but reports indicate Ed Gayeski of Wilkes-Barre will be named to succeed varsity basketball coach John Konawalik.

Yanks lose ground after Chicago rainout

Bosox remain hot with 4-2 victory

BLOOMINGTON (UPI) — Cecil Cooper hit a solo homer and rookie left fielder Jim Rice twice robbed Glenn Borgman of homers with leaping catches Wednesday night to spark the Boston Red Sox to a 4-2 triumph over the Minnesota Twins.

Roger Moret, with ninth inning relief help from Jim Wolloughby, gained his sixth win of the year against one loss while Jim Hughes suffered his eighth loss in 16 decisions.

Boston opened the scoring with two runs in the second inning. Walks to Rice and Rico Petrocelli around a single by Carlton Fisk loaded the bases, and with two outs, Rick Burleson singled home two runs.

The Twins tied it in the same inning when Dan Ford singled and scored on a double by Lyman Bostock which bounced off the glove of Fred Lynn in centerfield. Bostock took third on a wild pitch and scored on a sacrifice fly.

THERE'S NO ESCAPE — Twin Boro baserunner Scott "Jumbo" Mery doesn't have much room to run as he's chased by Pocono North-South third baseman Larry Sterba. Mery finally just falls to

Twin Boro forces rematch
vs. Pocono for Senior title

By JOE DeVIVO
Record Sports Writer

SWIFTWATER — Twin Boro and Pocono North-South will have to square off again before a District 20 Senior Little League champion can be crowned.

Twin Boro kept its hopes for the District 20 title alive Wednesday night by handing Pocono North-South its first loss of the double elimination tournament, 9-4.

The two teams will play again at 6 p.m. today at Dansbury Park with the District 20 title awaiting the winner.

Twin Boro, which had jumped off to a 6-0 lead against Pocono North-South in the tournament opener only to lose 8-7, grabbed a big lead in Wednesday night's rematch, but this time refused to fold.

The winners spotted Pocono North-South a brief 1-0 lead before shelling starter Joel Miller from the mound with a seven-run outburst in the second inning.

Jay Smith started the big inning off by lining a triple to right center for his sixth consecutive hit in his last six official at bats in the tournament.

Smith broke for the plate on Dave Barnes' bunt and beat first baseman Tim Reed's hurried throw home to tie the game. Marty Werkheiser singled Barnes over to third and Barnes scored on Brian Shields' sacrifice fly to right.

Keith Witman, Tom Carmella, and Jeff Wert all rapped run-scoring singles to drive Miller from the box and Lue Nase greeted relief hurler Chip Cilurso with another base hit for a run.

By the time Smith was caught stealing to end the inning, seven runners had crossed the plate and all Twin Boro had to do was rely on Scott "Jumbo" Mery to hold the lead.

Mery preserved the lead all right, but not without quite a scare from Pocono North-South. The losers collected 12 hits and seven bases on balls off Mery, but stranded 12 baserunners and could only score four times.

Mery was in almost constant trouble, as Pocono North-South had at least two baserunners in every inning, but he always managed to escape the jams without too much damage.

Pocono North-South's best chance to get right back in the ballgame came in the third inning when walks to Steve Mader and Tim O'Boyle and a bloop single to left by Larry Sterba loaded the bases with nobody out.

Mery walked Dave Lewis to force in one run and looked as though he was in worse trouble when Randy Transue followed with a fly ball to deep left-center field.

But centerfielder Keith Witman raced over to make the catch and fired a strike to Wert at the plate to nail O'Boyle trying to score.

Mery then got Tim Reed to go down swinging to end the inning.

Pocono North-South manager Jerry Keiper was ejected from the game in the fourth inning by home plate umpire Stanley Lee after protesting an appeal play.

Pocono's Cilurso attempted to tag from third on a fly ball and although he scored after the catch, the umpires ruled on an appeal that Cilurso left too soon and he was called out to end the inning.

Ex-Giant Tunnell dies

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. (UPI) — Emlen Tunnell, star of the famed N.Y. Giant "umbrella defense" of the 1950s, died of an apparent heart attack at the team's training camp Tuesday night.

Tunnell, 50, was stricken in his dormitory room at 11:45 p.m. and apparently succumbed immediately.

During his brilliant National Football League career as a safety man, he set four league records which still stand. He played 11 seasons with the Giants (1948-58) and three more with the Green Bay Packers (1959-1961.)

His records are 79 career interceptions, most punt returns (258) and most yardage on both interception and punt returns.

Tunnell, who played football at the University of Iowa and while in service with the Navy, was not scouted by the Giants. He merely walked into the club's offices and asked for a tryout. He went on to play in the All Pro bowl seven straight years.

A member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, he was named to the 50th anniversary All-NFL all-time team.

Nicklaus-Miller dollar duel Canadian Open feature

MONTREAL (UPI) — With only $129 separating them on the PGA money list, Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller seek to establish a clear cut dollar advantage in this week's $200,000 Canadian Open.

Most of the top professionals will be competing for the first time since the British Open two weeks ago when they tee off Thursday on the tough par 70, 6,628-yard Blue course at the Royal Montreal Golf Club.

It will be the strongest field in the 66 years of the Canadian Open, with British Open Champion Tom Watson, U.S. open winner Lou Graham and top money winners Tom Weiskopf, John Mahaffey, Lee Trevino and perennial threat Gary Player of South Africa entered in the 72-hole event.

Hale Irwin, who trails top earner Nicklaus by $572 on this year's money list, is the only real standout on the PGA circuit not competing in the tournament. He dropped out earlier this week, apparently to spend some time at home, after competing in the British classic at Carnoustie, Scotland, and at Pleasant Valley in Massachusetts last week.

Nicklaus, who was in the running but fell short in both the U.S. and British Opens, has to be the favorite here, as he is in nearly every tournament he enters.

He has never won a Canadian Open, finishing second in 1965 and 1968.

With victories in the Masters earlier this year, plus first place finishes in the Doral and Heritage tournaments, Nicklaus has earned $180,799 this year on the tour.

Miller, who was tied with Nicklaus for second at Carnoustie and finished a stroke behind the "Golden Bear" in the Masters, is second among the money leaders with $180,670. But despite the high earnings, he has not won since very early in the year when he swept three of the first five tournaments on the PGA circuit.

Musselman reportedly under scrutiny

ICAA points finger at Minnesota

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) — The University of Minnesota Wednesday said it has been accused of numerous violations of NCAA athletic regulations and will investigate them "fully and impartially."

Vice President Stanley B. Kegler said the university won't reveal the allegations or what sports are involved until it completes its investigation. But it has been reported the NCAA was checking recruiting practices of Minnesota basketball Coach Bill Musselman.

Kegler said there were "around 100" allegations on the NCAA list—some major and some "mainly requests for information"—covering matters since 1971. The university has until Oct. 1 to investigate and respond to the NCAA.

Kegler also said Musselman is represented by an attorney and the university's attorneys have been in touch with him.

Musselman has been quoted as saying he is guilty of some "minor, inconsequential infractions" but that "my conscience is clear." He said he's sure most coaches are guilty of greater violations "in the fierce recruiting wars."

There have been reports that Musselman will become coach of the San Diego team in the ABA for $50,000 a year or more, but Musselman has said he plans to stay at Minnesota.

Kegler said he didn't know Musselman's plans but they have no bearing on the investigation because "the institution is being investigated, not the coaching staff."

Kegler was asked at a news conference if it was possible there were any violations so serious that a coach could be fired.

"Yes, it could happen," he said.

Asked whether any funds were involved in the allegations, Kegler said, "There are allegations about funds but I am aware of none."

He said the allegations came in a letter from Warren S. Brown, assistant executive director of the NCAA, to University President C. Peter Magrath and the school has until Oct. 1 to respond, "indicating remedial steps, if any, we have taken."

Kegler said the university is taking these steps: "We have secured legal counsel outside the university to investigate the alleged violations."

—President Magrath has asked me to assume administrative responsibility for working with the NCAA, our counsel and the parties involved."

—"I have asked the Twin Cities Campus Assembly Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics to act as the official panel to receive the findings of the investigation and to propose remedial steps."

Kegler said Athletic Director Paul Giel has agreed to excuse himself from the investigation to assure that "no one intimately associated" with Minnesota athletics is involved in the review process.

Player strike possibility worries new NBA chief

NEW YORK (UPI) — NBA commissioner Larry O'Brien Wednesday ruled out any possibility of a merger with the ABA in the foreseeable future, but confessed to another headache of his new office — a potential player strike prior to the 1975-76 season.

O'Brien replaced Walter Kennedy as league head early in June and successfully weathered the touchy George McGinnis case, which he said was reminiscent of his election night days as chairman of the Democratic Party. O'Brien nullified McGinnis' signing with the New York Knicks and watched Big George agree to terms with the Philadelphia 76ers at 2.30 in the morning.

"Cliffhanger days," he smiled, "we spent many hours with McGinnis before obtaining his final decision."

On the merger issue, O'Brien said the court directed both leagues not to discuss consolidation unless the NBA Players Association is willing to participate. The players, however, are in litigation against a merger, claiming it would reduce their bargaining power for better salaries.

"Besides," O'Brien said, "there is no current interest among the owners right now concerning merger, or for that matter, expansion. They are satisfied with the present setup."

O'Brien also admitted "there was a possibility the players won't report to camp. "Contract negotiations were suspended after a brief discussion and we've filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board."

"However, I'm optimistic because there is an element of faith and reasonableness on both sides. We think we can resolve all issues."

Pro baseball and football has been hit by costly strikes in the last few years, but NBA players, among the highest paid in sports, have never struck the establishment.

second preseason exhibition game at Portland Sunday night.

Waller, a former all-pro in the National Football League, said he felt that "for personal reasons it is in my best interests and the best interests of the team that someone else continue what I have started."

There was no immediate announcement concerning Waller's successor, but a spokesman said offensive line coach Joe Gardi probably would handle the team for the Portland game.

Waller, 42, was named head coach of the Philadelphia club last season before the franchise was awarded. His team carded a 9-11 record and lost in the opening round of the playoffs to the now defunct Florida Blazers.

Waller's statement said, "I would like to announce that as of today, I have resigned as head coach of the Philadelphia Bell. This is a very difficult decision for me to make."

"I think this team has the type of players who can bring Philadelphia a championship football team and I wish the team all the success in the world at Portland Sunday and in all their remaining games this season."

Your Horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Tangible benefits indicated if you handle responsibilities conscientiously. Don't neglect the substantial for "flashy" but momentary gain.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Care needed in both budgetary and domestic matters. Also, avoid restlessness and changeability — both tendencies now.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — A tabulation of "musts" may uncover a weak program — one that should be pepped up to show your abilities to better advantage.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Not much planetary help here. How the day turns out will be largely up to yourself. Use your wits to project the effective and eliminate the mediocre.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — A curious suggestion may be made. If you have even the slightest doubt about it, reject summarily. Your hunches are usually correct.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — If someone deserves your time and talents, give where it will help, but refrain where too much is expected. And don't promise more than you can deliver.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Even your brightest ideas could meet with opposition, but if you're sure you're on the right track, go ahead and launch them. Others will come around to your way of thinking later.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — A day for discretion. Be sure you do not offend friends or co-workers by thoughtless words. Work out disagreements, if any, with logic — and graciousness.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — Stellar influences stimulate your ingenuity, adaptability and capacity for extra work and production on short notice. All will be rewarded.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — Teamwork will be important now, so make it a point to associate and work with those whose interests and aims are similar to your own.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — Avoid tendencies toward restlessness and unruliness. Note warning signals. Many errors and misguided moves can thus be prevented. Shun extremes.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — A different tack may be the trick you need now. See all sides of a project or discussion, and do not permit pleasure to supersede duties.

YOU BORN TODAY are a Cancer-Leo cuspal (one born at the change of Signs) and, as such, are endowed with some of the finest traits of both. Your potentials for happiness and success are so numerous and so varied that you should leave no stone unturned to develop your finest and have a truly rewarding life. Fields in which you could make the greatest success: literature, music, science, banking, medicine or the stage.

Opening lead — three of hearts.
A declarer sometimes gets involved in making hairsplitting decisions that, in essence, determine the outcome.
Consider this deal from the Spingold team of four championship. At the first table, South won the heart lead with the ace and played a low trump to dummy's king, losing to the ace.
East cashed the ace of clubs and returned a low heart, hoping his partner would win and give him a club ruff.
However, declarer ruffed the heart — but still had to go down one. It did not matter whether he played the jack of trumps or the nine; in either case, West would take the queen of trumps and return the queen of clubs to put a quick end to South's hopes.

At the second table, where the contract was also four spades doubled, declarer won the heart lead with the ace, returned a low trump at trick two, and played the six from dummy!
This exceptionally deep finesse had a magic effect on the outcome. East won with the ten, cashed the ace of clubs, and returned a heart. Declarer ruffed, played another trump on which the Q-K-A appeared, and that was the end of the matter. Four spades doubled, bid and made.
It is not easy to prove that the six play from dummy is better than the king play — without seeing all four hands — because there are many intangible factors that must be considered and weighed.
But there is no doubt that the second declarer was right in the actual case — and was perhaps also right theoretically. But even if it could be proved that he was theoretically wrong, it would still be hard to argue with the actual result he obtained.

Religious language suffers pangs of fem-lib challenge

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

Language continues to present a raft of problems for churches — most especially in the language used to speak religiously about God and humankind.

Many of the problems have been put into sharper focus by the emergence of women as a potent force in church life and the woman liberation movement's challenge to male-dominated language throughout society.

Paraphrasing, however, it should be noted that not all of the problems with religious language are caused by an increased militancy of the women's movement. The question of how to speak of God has been a particularly thorny one of 20th century theologians and continues to be the subject of much thought, debate and theological reflection.

A lot of people would like to laugh off women's irritation at such things as the old hymn "Faith of Our Fathers" or even "The Lord's Prayer, which begins "Our Father."

But an increasing number of church officials think it is very important to take such matters seriously.

"In the name of the Gospel and in the name of justice," the executive council of the Lutheran Church in America was recently told, it has the "strong obligation to institute language changes at many points" of its constitutional, theological and liturgical documents.

The comment was made by Dr. Frederick Wentz, professor of church history at the Hamma School of Theology, Springfield, Ohio, in a paper on the use of "inclusive" language.

The paper is expected to serve as the basic working document for studies on all the church's documents requested by the LCA's 1974 convention.

In his paper Wentz makes the distinction between what he calls "people-language" and "God-language" and believes change is most pressing in the area of "people-language," where there are "no theological principles that could impede such progress."

He adds "it may well be" the Lutheran denomination already has a consensus that will allow to minimize maleness in references to God.

"At any rate, church agencies should be committed to working in that direction," he said.

But in a fascinating addendum to the paper, there are signs of how difficult that might be.

The addendum is called "A beginning look at 'Father' as a symbol for God," and in it Wentz noted that "Father" is "our most profound, persistent symbol for God. It is deeply meaningful to many, many Christians today."

Testing some of the substitutes demonstrates the difficulty.

"Terms like 'Householder, 'Parent,' 'Creator' carry some of the meaning but lack the touch of personal intimacy," he said. And he noted that "in a patriarchal society 'Mother' does not carry the same sense of initiation and authority."

"As our society becomes increasingly less patriarchal there could be wisdom in using 'Mother' more often," he said. "If our culture becomes less family oriented, entirely new analogies may become necessary...."

"Thus it seems likely that this image will in the future be unable to carry the same weight of meaning in our imagery and devotional language as it has in the past."

Wentz notes on "Father" was labelled "a beginning look" and he would, no doubt, agree that there is still a long way to go.

Jack O'Brian's

Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Doug Henning is the creator and star of Broadway's long-running "The Magic Show." This coming December he will host a special, live, for NBC-TV called "Doug Henning's World of Magic."

Henning, whose major in college was psychology, is widely regarded as being responsible for the enormous revival of interest in magic.

Henning recently let us in on some of the tricks of his trade, and we'll pass them along; but don't tell anybody else...

"For centuries people have explained the magician's art by saying that the hand is faster than the eye. Although some illusions depend on rapid movements, these movements are never faster than the human eye can perceive."

"The real secrets of magic are psychological. What a magician really does is to create the illusion of something magical happening in the minds of the audience. It is the mind that is really deceived. You could say that the mind is led on ingeniously, step by step to defeat its own logic."

"Even in normal life, what we perceive is not what the physical eye records. What we think we see is influenced by past experiences, expectations of what is going to happen and our attitudes and emotions at the time of perception. A magician manipulates attitudes, uses past experiences and sets up expectations to put his illusions across."

"For example, let's look at the very convincing illusion of a wizard throwing a ball into the air three times and on the third time the ball vanishes into thin air. The first two times, the ball is really thrown into the air. This gives the audience the experience of seeing the ball thrown up twice, and the expectation of seeing the ball thrown into the air a third time. On the third throw, the ball is never actually thrown, although all the same throwing movements are made. The audience, however, sees the ball thrown and is amazed to see the ball seemingly vanish in mid-air. It is the mind that has influenced what the eye has seen and thus the illusion successfully created.

"Along with mental misdirection, magicians also use straight sensory misdirection. One of the craziest and most convincing sensory misdirection illusions was the legendary Blackstone's live donkey production. In this illusion, Blackstone produced a live baby donkey from under a number of silk hankchiefs. He did this center-stage away from all stage props. The method is ridiculously simple, but very convincing."

"First, Blackstone would produce about 30 large scarfs from a previously shown empty tube, moving across the stage as he displayed them. As he arrived about five feet from the right stage curtain, an assistant would enter from the left side of the stage and trip spilling a tray all over the stage."

"At that exact moment, Blackstone would step behind the curtain for an instant, pick up the baby donkey waiting there for him and hide it behind all the hankchiefs. He would then immediately walk towards center-stage. By the time the audience looked back at him, he was at center-stage with what appeared to be a pile of hankchiefs in his hand. Blackstone would then dramatically shake the hankchiefs for a few moments and whip them aside, producing a live donkey in the center of the stage. Needless to say, the audience was stunned."

"Magic has been a successful art since the first cavemen performed and misdirected people with the old cup and ball trick. You may recall seeing a carnival barker drawing attention by placing a ball or pea under a cup and then shuffling 3 cups around. When you try to guess which cup the object is under — you're wrong! Well, our ancestors were doing that old chestnut in 2500 B.C."

"Children are harder to fool than adults, and strangely enough, the brighter the adult, the easier it is to fool him. Children have not learned the rules of observing that adults have long been conditioned to. For example, if the magician has an object hidden in his right hand, which he will produce, the adult is conditioned not to notice a relaxed hand because it appears to be natural and certainly not containing anything. A very young child, however, has not yet 'learned' that when a hand is relaxed it is empty and is apt to keep his eye on the wrong hand. A magician naturally plays on the previous conditioning of the mind. I find the more intelligent the adults, the more they seem to appreciate the magic and appear to be less questioning."

"The art of a magician is to create wonder. I really believe if one lives with a feeling of astonishment, one's life will become filled with joy. A magician is deceiving the senses and the mind, but the reason he is doing this is to entertain and give a sense of wonder... And who couldn't use some of that today?"

He wants real belly dancing

NEW YORK (UPI) — When will America start taking its belly dancers seriously, demands Ibrahim.

Ibrahim, whose real name is Bobby Farrah is a leading New York choreographer and teacher of "classical" belly dancing. He wants to erase the sleazy image created by "bump and grind fakers" and have belly dancing recognized as an important part of the cultural heritage of Americans of Middle Eastern descent.

"The whole country is searching for its roots," said Ibrahim, whose parents were Lebanese immigrants.

He said the dance had its origins 4,000 years ago and it has "survived until today in a society where three out of four of the world's major religions disapprove of it."

He said he tries to have his pupils "get into the culture and get rid of the show business stigma."

Ibrahim and other leading proponents of Middle Eastern Dance—Serena and Electra of New York, Cheri of Connecticut, and Fazio of Indianapolis—were among the featured instructors this week at the "Second Annual Belly Dancing Experience," a three-day seminar at a Manhattan Hotel.

About 300 women, ranging from novices to professionals, teenagers to middle-aged housewives, took the $50 course—some coming from as far away as Toronto and Texas, according to Paul Monty, president of International Dance Seminars.

Electra, who said she has been performing for four decades, said the term belly dancing is actually an English corruption of the Arabic "belah-di," which means a "dance to slow music" and has nothing to do with belly movements.

But a reporter seeking to clear up this and other misconceptions walked over to one of the booths near the ballroom where the traditional costume of sheer fabrics, beads and sequins was being sold.

"What is that really called?" he asked, pointing to the costume.

"We call it a belly dancing costume," was the reply.

U.S. gets tough with United Nations

By BRUCE W. MUNN
Chief U.N. Correspondent
UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The Arab world might be able to muster enough votes to expel Israel from the United Nations but it not likely to happen this year at least—the cost would be too great. It could include American departure, too.

The threat came from 40 Moslem foreign ministers meeting in Tehran in advance of this year's U.N. General Assembly sessions—a special session beginning Sept. 1 and the 30th annual regular session beginning Sept. 16.

In the first place, Israel's actual expulsion is parliamentarily impossible. Expulsion from the United Nations can be achieved by a vote of the General Assembly only upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

And a U.S. veto in the Security Council is certain to kill any expulsion move.

What the Assembly could do, as it did to South Africa last year under a ruling by then Assembly President Abdelaziz Bouteflika of Algeria, is decide to suspend Israel for the duration of its annual meeting.

But the Assembly is likely to take a stern reckoning of the cost before it does even that. The cost is undoubtedly more than even the oil-rich Arab world would be willing to pay.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger warned in Milwaukee earlier this week that the vocally strong third world majority of the 138-nation world organization already has provided incentives for the United States to "simply depart the scene."

When he spoke, Kissinger deleted an event stronger in his prepared text but it was widely quoted nonetheless:

"Those who seek to manipulate U.N. membership by procedural abuse may well inherit an empty shell."

The new American ambassador to the U.N., Daniel Patrick Moynihan, is expected to reflect the tougher U.S. line this year toward the third world majority in the world organization.

The implied threat of withdrawal of U.S. financial support and possibly even membership is more than most of U.N. members want to face.

Ambassador Ivor Ricard, a hard-nosed labor politician from Britain, said recently that withdrawal of the United States would mean the end of the world organization.

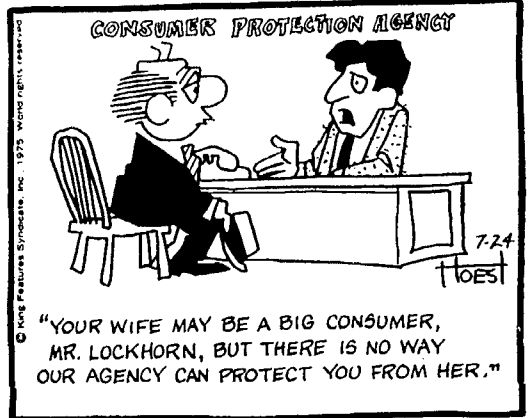

Short of withdrawal, a congressional decision to cut off appropriations to the United Nations would hamstring the organization.

The United States contributes 25 per cent of the U.N. budget and up to 40 per cent of the budgets of the specialized agencies and the special funds. The proponents of Israel's expulsion contribute .02 per cent of the U.N. upkeep.

The International Labor Organization already is only limping along. It took disciplinary action against Israel, and the United States in turn withheld its 25 per cent budget contribution.
